Fingers Into Claws
A Bigger Universe

DONALD RICHBERG, sometimes called President Roosevelt's "managing editor," tells business men they ought to create jobs, and business must "do its part." Many will detect an ominous tone in Mr. Richberg's statement:

"Perhaps it might be cheaper, even in a money sense, to find work for those idle hands to do than to support the armies necessary to hold them back, if once those pleading fingers were turned into threatening claws."

Nobody wants to see "pleading fingers turned into threatening claws," to borrow Mr. Richberg's powerful simile, but creating jobs, except when government does it, is difficult. A business man cannot indefinitely employ clerks that he doesn't need, if he wants to stay in business. An industrialist cannot continue turning out goods with no one to buy them.

Mr. Richberg, an able man, renders public service when he talks so frankly. His statement, "The greatest dangers that threaten America are those of internal dissension," makes you think hard.

It is not pleasant to think what might happen if the government decided to discontinue its spending, and pile up an unbearable load of bond and interest indebtedness.

Coming from Mr. Richberg, who is so close to the administration, this New Year pessimism is disturbing.

Professor Einstein announces that he may have been mistaken in his belief that the universe is limited. He thinks now that it may be LIMITLESS.

It has been suggested here that Professor Jeans and others accepted too hastily the Einstein theory that space is a contraction folding over on itself, so that, looking at a universe three hundred million light years away, and going on a little farther, you might look all the way around and see another side of the universe, like a man with a circular telescope looking around the earth and seeing his own back.

Professor Einstein is one of the greatest mathematical intellects that ever lived, but undertaking to limit the universe, however, even by the most ingenious space-time combinations, is dangerous.

A small crab standing on the edge of the Pacific could form no clear idea of that ocean and the land beyond it. And a human being, even with his two hundred-inch reflector and his marvellous higher mathematics, can hardly hope to question this universe or answer satisfactorily the question:

"What is beyond?"

Two days more, and 1934 slips into the past and into the hands of historians. They may say about it things that will surprise us, for, like a fly on a big oil painting, we are too close to events to know just what they mean.

There is one small lesson that might be gathered by the dullest, namely, work hard and keep part of what you earn, if you want peace in this world.

Roy Howard, who was a good reporter before overwhelming prosperity diverted him, asked distinguished business men what they thought about 1935 and received answers hardly enthusiastic.

Gerard Swope, head of General Electric, said:

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., head of General Motors, responsible owners of its forty odd million shares, thinks, "1935 should be somewhat better."

R. B. White, head of Western Union, with a high forehead and a powerful, wide jaw, says:

"Business is improving now and 1935 prospects are better."

Mr. Seuberg, head of Standard Oil of Indiana, says the leaders ought "to reflect as much optimism as possible. We are beginning to see the way out of the woods."

Nobody is absolutely enthusiastic, and that, perhaps, is a good thing. Everybody was a little TOO enthusiastic in 1929.

JAPAN SCRAPS NAVAL Treaty DONE

CALLS FOR NEW DEAL ON SHIPS

FORMAL NOTICE HANDED HULL BY SATIO

By Associated Press.

Washington, Dec. 29—Japan scrapped the Washington naval treaty today, calling once more for a new pact which would give her equality and wipe out all offensive weapons of war.

The historic moment the world has been awaiting came when Ambassador Hirosi Saito stepped into the State Department and handed Secretary Hull the formal notice that after December 31, 1936, Japan will not be bound by the treaty which gives her the "3" in the famous 5-5-3 ratio.

The original diplomat, who was present 12 years ago when the treaty limiting fighting navies was born, thus sounded its death knell.

In a statement, he expressed hope a new treaty could be agreed upon within the next two years.

Japan, he said, is willing to discard half her navy if "a common maximum limit" for the United States, Great Britain and the far eastern empire is established.

'Clue' Links Friend to Bruno

By International News Service

Flemington, N. J., Dec. 29—Evidence to warrant the arrest of "a close associate" of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in connection with the kidnaping of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., has been obtained by the authorities, it was learned exclusively today.

The identity of the suspect is withheld at the request of a high state official because additional clinching evidence is being gathered.

The arrest may be delayed until after the conclusion of the trial of Hauptmann for the baby's murder, which begins here in three days.

"Complications" in Hauptmann's trial might result from an immediate arrest, the official said. A decision has not yet been reached as to whether to accuse the suspect of being an accomplice in the actual kidnaping or an accomplice after the fact.

Facts so far obtained indicate that the suspect took part in planning the kidnaping.

Today's disclosure signals the result of several weeks' intensive work by New York, New Jersey and federal authorities, who have been convinced that Hauptmann was not alone in the crime.

Gloucester, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Gloucester Bar Association today voted to oppose the appointment by Governor Ely of John C. Pappas, Watertown lawyer, as associate justice of the Eastern District Court of Gloucester.

The association held Pappas resided too far from Gloucester to be of real service to the city.

STUDENTS ASSAIL HEARST PAPERS

By CHARLES N. WHEELER
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Chicago, Dec. 29—Closing sessions of the annual convention of the Student League for Industrial Democracy at Northwestern University yesterday were devoted mostly to speeches and resolutions condemning the Hearst newspapers for printing news of radical activities in American colleges.

The leaders declared that before the revolution could be effected and the present order overthrown, it would be necessary to counteract the influence of the Hearst Press in the United States.

While most of the student delegates, representing some 20 states and about 40 universities and colleges claimed affiliation only with the Socialistic party, several of the leaders were proud to claim participation in the movement to

GLORIA IN WEEK-END WITH MOTHER

New York, Dec. 29—Child Gloria Vanderbilt, her mother's week-end daughter, was whisked into the Vanderbilt home at 10 a. m. today under the watchful eyes of five detectives.

It was the child's second week-end with Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, who is carrying her fight for full custody to the appellate division since Supreme Court Justice Carew made Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, little Gloria's paternal aunt, the five-day guardian.

Gloria will stay with her mother tonight and return to Mrs. Whitney at sundown tomorrow, as Justice Carew directed.

BRITISH CHIEF Justice Weds

Totteridge, England, Dec. 29 (AP)—The head of England's judiciary, Lord Chief Justice Hewart, became a bridegroom today, marrying Miss Jean Stewart, a nurse who has attended him upon various occasions.

The bride is a member of a well-known New Zealand family. Lord Hewart is 64, while the bride is in her 30's.

THRONG BATTLES FOR AUTO PLATES

Thousands of automobile owners stormed the offices of the Registry of Motor Vehicles on Nashua street today seeking registration plates for the new year.

State troopers battled to preserve order as harassed clerks tried to cope with the situation.

At noon today it was estimated that more than 50,000 applications for plates had been received with more than 350,000 plates given out already.

RADIO FINDERS SEEK VICTIMS ON MOUNTAIN

By Associated Press

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 29—Radio compass stations of two countries were unable today to locate four men who reported they were snowbound on an Adirondack mountain peak after the wreck last night of the Boston-Cleveland air liner.

By Associated Press

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 29 — Wrecked and snow-bound on a mountain top, a Boston-Cleveland air liner missing since last night, radioed today that she thought she was "near Rockwood, N. Y., seven miles west of Gloversville."

The three pilots and one passenger, safe and huddled about a signal fire, sent that message on a rapidly failing radio.

After sending the brief message, the plane shut down its radio to save it for later communication in guiding searching parties to the location.

Searching parties immediately started for Rockwood, a hamlet in the Adirondack foothills.

There they hoped to see some smoke signals which Pilot Ernest E. Dryer said would be made from a big fire built near the wreckage.

"We may be wrong," Pilot Dryer radioed to the American Airlines in Albany, "but we have figured our position from radio signals."

As Dryer called, powerful radio stations in the United States and Canada were sending signals from four directions to help the plane discover her location.

In addition, Co-Pilot Jack H Brown of Boston sent the following message:

"Everybody's all right. Please

CALLS FUEHRER 'NO GENTILE, NO NORDIC'

Copyright, 1934, By International News Service

Waldmohr, Germany, Dec. 29—An outburst of temper in which she intimated that Adolf Hitler was Jewish was the reason for the imprisonment here of Elsa Sittell, New York secretary, on December 23, a customs official said today.

Miss Sittell, 25-year-old naturalized American, was enroute to visit her parents in Gandloff, near Trier, for Christmas when she ran into difficulty during a routine customs inspection.

She was arrested and forced to spend Christmas in jail. She still was imprisoned today.

The customs officer said:

"Miss Sittell seemed to resent the baggage inspection procedure and stalked shouting at officials.

"Although the examination continued politely, Miss Sittell gave vent to her nerves and broke forth in wild denunciations. Asked to be quiet, she burst forth:

"'Oh, your Hitler looks Jewish. He's not German anyhow. His type is certainly not Teutonic, so what's the idea of treating Jews so harshly?'

"She was reprimanded again, but she continued to slander Hitler, remarking:

"'You can bet your life he's no Gentile!'"

The incident occurred in Schoneburg on the Saar frontier.

"Thereupon," continued the official, "Miss Sittell was arrested and brought here. Her case now is in the hands of a prosecutor, but the holiday season is delaying action, and she probably will have to spend New Year's Day in prison.

"At least she will be jailed until her case comes up in a special court at Frankenthal.

"She is in a comfortable cell now, and is well treated. She is not complaining, apparently now realizing she is in jail through her own fault."

The American consul-general in Frankfort was expected to arrive here soon to confer with authorities and interview Miss Sittell, who is not Jewish.

Miss Sittell Once Aided J. W. Davis

Miss Sittell was at one time secretary to John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for president in 1924, and worked for his New York law firm before she sailed for Europe.

Japan Kills U. S. Naval Pact

PROMISES PEACE IN PACIFIC

New Accord Sought

By International News Service

Washington, Dec. 29—At the same time Japanese Ambassador Hirosi Saito was handing to Secretary Hull the notice that sealed the doom of the 1922 naval treaty, today the Japanese Embassy released statements by the ambassador and a "spokesman" of the Japanese foreign office in Tokio designed to allay international excitement over Japan's action.

Both statements emphasized Japan was desirous of reaching a new naval accord that would prevent a world naval race.

However, both made it plain Japan would insist upon naval parity as the price for its willingness to enter any future agreements.

Both statements also stressed the Japanese proposal for abolition of what Tokio considers offensive weapons of naval warfare, battleships and aircraft carriers, held by this country's naval experts to be the backbone of the American navy.

They also stressed Tokio's oft-repeated plea that it would be only too glad to engage in drastic naval disarmament—provided the United States and Great Britain acquiesce in its demand for naval parity.

Bolder Than Saito

The language of the foreign office "spokesman's" statement was bolder than that of Saito. It declared the allocation of an inferior naval ratio to Japan, "so detrimental to our national prestige," was "bound to remain a source of permanent and profound discontent to our people."

"In view of the present state of extraordinary development in warships, aircraft and other naval feaiies which recognize inequality of armaments among the powers can no longer afford security of national defense to Japan," the statement added.

"The Japanese government is convinced that the cause of disarmament can best be served and the security of the powers permanently assured by concluding an equitable agreement founded upon the following principles."

It then cited the Japanese proposal for abolition or drastic reduction of "offensive" weapons and establishment of a "common upper limit" for each power.

"In the light of these basic principles," it added, "it is impossible for the Japanese government to acquiesce in the continuation for a further term of the Washington treaty of naval armaments, which not only permits the retention of the offensive arms, but admits disparity in naval strength through the adoption of a ratio system."

Logical Result

The statement gave assurance that "the present step taken by the Japanese government is only a logical outcome of our fundamental policy which aims at the conclusion of another pact to supersede the Washington treaty."

In announcing the treaty, Japan defied both the United States and Great Britain and completely disregarded American Ambassador Norman H. Davis' recent last minute warning at London that such action would threaten world peace and create danger of a naval race by leading to "conditions of insecurity, of international suspicion and of costly competition."

Navy to 'Show Off' To Japan

By Associated Press

San Pedro, Calif., Dec. 29—Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, commander of the United States fleet, today disclosed his force would engage in maneuvers of unparalleled scope throughout the East Pacific early next summer.

Venturing almost to oriental waters, ships of the fleet will participate in far-flung war games covering more than 5,000,000 square miles of the Pacific. Between May 3 and June 10 they will maneuver from the Aleutian islands, almost within sight of the Siberian coast, southward to Midway Island, 1,000 miles west of Honolulu, on which a temporary base will be established.

The fleet, reported to be the largest and most powerful armada ever assembled under a single command in the world's naval history, will consist of 177 surface ships, 477 airplanes, the dirigible Macon and a force of approximately 55,000 officers and men.

tell our folks," Brown said cheerfully.

"We crashed up in a group of trees. We have built a fire so you can find us.

"We are at 2200 feet altitude."

"We are trying to repair the radio so as to get in better touch with you."

The American Air Lines began setting up directional radio finders at Albany, Boston and Buffalo.

By comparing the direction and strength of Brown's messages, they planned to plot the location of the ship.

Others aboard the ship, besides Brown, were R. D. Handbrook of the Federal Department of Education, Washington; Ernest Dryer of Cleveland, the pilot, and Dale Dryer, his brother.

The plane had been missing approximately 11 hours when the message from the pilot was received at the local airport.

Boston Planes to Rush Food to Fliers

Food for the occupants of the Boston airliner, marooned on a mountainside in New York state, was loaded aboard two National Guard planes at the Boston Airport today.

The ships were ready to take off at a moment's notice, as soon as the icy drizzle had subdued.

The pilots had orders not to wait, if the drizzle continued. A third plane was to accompany them.

Meanwhile a giant Condor liner was parked in the center of the airport, flashing radio signals to try to locate the stranded airliner whose co-pilot Jack Brown of this city and Lawrence, was battling against time with rapidly weakening radio batteries.

Receiving signals from Boston and other points and estimating their strength, Brown flashed he figured his location as near Gloversville, N. Y. He was doing his work expertly, local airmen said. He did not try to communicate with other points.

A radio beam from Albany was swung until it had Brown in its path at 1 p. m. It was then Boston's turn to get Brown in its beam. He would be at the point where the two beams crossed.

However, it was believed from wavering signals that Brown's set was heating up and he was instructed to shut off his transmitter and receiver for an hour.

Carry Food

Coast guards here also brought their powerful direction finder into use.

A group of airline officials hovered in the radio room at the Boston airport listening to the infrequent flashes from the mountainside.

Brown's voice came in strongly when it came.

It was first heard dramatically and unexpectedly about 9 a. m., when the plane and its occupants were entirely lost.

Out of the ether came a voice, startling everybody into silence.

"Everybody's all right . . . On the north side of a mountain . . . We crashed in the trees . . . We cannot be seen from the air, but have built a fire . . ."

The big Condor, a sister ship, was wheeled out to put its two-way powerful radio into action.

The National Guard ships will carry food in three-foot containers, held under the wings and released by bomb levers.

Messages will also be dropped in bags attached to parachutes. Instructions will be given so that code messages can be sent from the mountainside to the planes.

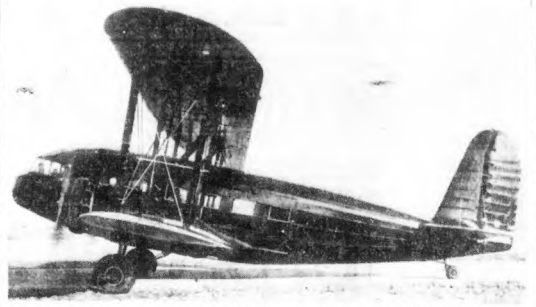
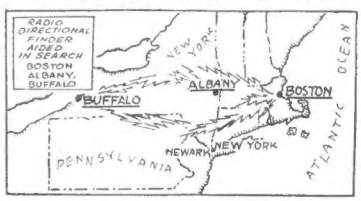
Sudden enlargement of month-end liquidating sales on the part of holders of December corn contracts had a disturbing effect. Considerable selling was of a stop-loss character.

Down in Wilds—But Safe!

Search by Radio for Grounded Boston Plane



In a plane of this type, a Curtiss-Condor transport job, equipped with two-way radio, a pilot, co-pilot and two passengers are awaiting rescue after having made a forced landing somewhere in the Adirondack foothills. They were Boston-bound from Syracuse, having abandoned a scheduled trip to Cleveland.



This map by a Boston Evening American sketch-artist shows how converging radio beams are "feeling" for the location of a big American Air Lines plane, forced down with four passengers somewhere in the foothills of the Adirondacks.

Radio Beams May Find Fliers in Wrecked Plane

By Associated Press

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 29—Like a giant finger, engineers sought to swing a radio beam into the Adirondack Mountains today to find a Boston-Cleveland air liner, wrecked and lost on a mountain top without serious injury to its four occupants.

By shifting the radio beam, Department of Commerce engineers thought they could get an answer from the plane telling when the beam signals sounded strongest.

The beam ordinarily runs east and west across New York State.

At the same time, efforts were made to throw a radio beam into the Adirondacks from Syracuse. By checking the direction of these beams at the moment the plane received them strongest, they hoped to plot the marooned party's location.

About noon the Department of Commerce radio station in Boston joined the search. From Boston the beam shot across 200 miles of Massachusetts, entered New York state and wavered back and forth in the Adirondacks.

Three times the plane flashed "O. K. now, Albany, Boston, Buffalo."

Each time the signal came too late. The radio fingers had swung too far and the work started all over again.

At 12:30 p. m. Manager Garrett said these three close contacts indicated the plane might be somewhere near Ox-Bow Lake, in Herkimer county.

LINDYS WILL RELIVE THEIR GRIEF

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Dec. 29—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are destined to relive as witnesses in Bruno Richard Hauptmann's trial, the ordeal of their first son's kidnaping and death, but John Hughes Curtis of Norfolk, Va., will probably be denied a part in the drama.

Curtis, the shipbuilder who once was convicted of obstructing justice for posing as a Lindbergh "intermediary," offered to testify against Hauptmann. Prosecutors, apparently intent on other aspects of their case against the Lindbergh kidnap-slaying suspect, were cool to his suggestion.

Though Curtis said he would swear that he has talked to Hauptmann and that the suspect showed him some of the Lindbergh ransom money, Attorney-General David T. Wilentz merely vouchsafed that the matter was "under advisement."

Colonel Lindbergh, for the first time in more than two years, went sorrowfully back yesterday to the Hopewell mansion, where Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., was stolen.

With four prosecuting officials at his heels, he paced through the empty rooms, telling calmly of the things he said and did on the wintry night of March 1, 1932, when the baby was taken from his crib to death.

DEATH 'Suit' Laid to PIRATES CAGE YIELDS SKELETON

By Associated Press

Hempstead, N. Y., Dec. 29—Legends of pirates on the Long Island coast were scanned afresh today by historians pondering the significance of the skeleton in an iron cage discovered by four small boys.

The skeleton was uncovered when when the boys, sliding down a sand pit in a vacant lot, caused the soil to shift.

It was inclosed in a close-fitting iron frame having a general resemblance to those used by the Spanish rulers of the new world to torture English buccaneers who fell into their hands.

The neck was inclosed in a circle of iron, with four iron bands running out from it and riveted together over the top of the head, where the contrivance was attached to a large spike.

It was the Conquistadores' custom to drive this spike into the wall and leave the wearer of the "suit" to die a lingering death in mid-air.

Other bands joined the collar to circles of iron around the body. The skeleton had obviously lain under ground for a great many years.

Various bands of pirates, including the notorious Captain Kidd, are known to haveu ed Long Island as a base of operations against the Spanish settlements in the West Indies in the seventeenth century. The mystery now awaits the judgment of the experts.

BEACHED LINER PULLED AFLOAT AGAIN

After lying beached off Governors Island a week, the freighter Ontario, which raced back from the Cape Cod canal a week ago last night with flames raging in her hold, was pulled into deep water this morning.

When the tide was at flood, and the easterly gale had added to the rise, tugs pulled the ship free, and assisted her to Union wharf. The Ontario was without power.

Discharge of the remaining cargo in the ship's holds will continue today and tomorrow, and when all of it has been removed, the steamer will enter drydock for survey and repairs.

Should Girls Tell Secret of Age?

No, Never!

POLICE EFFORTS DOOMED, FAIR SEX WARNS

It's just like a man to try to get from a woman the ONE secret she can keep . . .

And just let him TRY to get it.

It's the gals talking. Superintendent Martin H. King of the Boston police department, and what started them is your latest edict that women must give their right age to the officers who are making the annual police listing.

They say, well let them tell it:

Miss Helen Mahoney, 61 Hamilton street, Dorchester, sophomore at Teachers College:

"I'm against it—giving my right age to a police officer, to you for this interview, or to anybody else. It will be some years before I'll be 'over 21' and required to give my age for a police listing, but when I am I'll not be telling—and that's a promise.

Yvonne Habert, 18, 670 Tremont street, Teachers College sophomore, on the contrary, had this to say:

"I haven't the slightest objection to telling my age to anybody who's interested in such an unimportant matter. Age is mental. A 20-year-old woman I admire tremendously is the living proof of it—she's the youngest person I know."

Miss Rose Di Pasquale, 19, 45 Cross street, stated:

"What of it? What difference does it make what age a person is? It isn't your age that matters—it's how you feel. There are women who are so vital and alive that they appear years younger than their actual age."

Miss Bobby Brooks, Hotel Bradford:

"That's a laugh—asking a woman for her right age and expecting the right answer. I'll bet Superintendent King will be mighty surprised when the returns on the listing come in and he finds all the women in Boston are aged from 22 to 35."

Plot 'to Get' Mayberry Charged

Two young lawyers "went out to get" Attorney Lowell A. Mayberry to make names for themselves and "carefully evaded the truth" to do it, counsel for Mayberry charged in Supreme Court today in final arguments on a second hearing to disbar the State street attorney.

Attorney Samuel Hoar, Mayberry counsel, named the two as George Belli, Jr., and John A. McArdle, both of whom were on the Massachusetts claims investigating committee, organized at the behest of insurance companies to investigate Massachusetts lawyers. Both testified at the hearing.

"I submit," Attorney Hoar said, "that the whole history of this case shows that Belli and McArdle were young members of the bar, who wanted to make a name for themselves and went out to get Mayberry to make that name for themselves."

DOCK DROWNING Called Accident

Gloucester, Dec. 29—His body recovered from the water alongside the United Fisheries dock here today, Jack MacDonald, of 49 Elm street, Stoneham, was declared a victim of accidental drowning by Medical Examiner Ira B. Hull.

MacDonald, who is survived by his wife and daughter, signed on as second engineer of the schooner Milton at Boston yesterday.

He went ashore here last night, and it is believed, he fell off the dock on returning to the ship.

Well, well, here it is again—just in time to fix things pretty for the New Year—the same ole Flanders endless chain of good luck. Remember how it runs?

"This letter of good luck was sent to me. Copy this and send it to four of your friends within 24 hours to whom you wish Good Luck. This chain was started by an American officer in Flanders. It should go three times around the world. Do not stop it or you will have Bad Luck—"

And so on and on. Some of 'em tell about how Mary Smith's barn burned down because she didn't send it—and how Jim Jones won the Sweepstakes when he did. And some of them were started by an English prisoner in Germany instead of an American officer in Flanders. But ALWAYS they warn you that The Boogie Man'll Get You if you don't send it along pronto.

Elsie Robinson

Trash—Tripe—Tommyrot? Sure—but it's a safe bet that seven out of every 10 people who receive that cock-eyed nonsense will hand it on, firmly believing that they'll have all the promised Bad Breaks if they don't. AND THEY'LL BE RIGHT!

Can't Explain It

Why are educated, twentieth century human beings still as superstitious as their grandpas? That's why. No use telling them it's nonsense—that things like that don't happen.

They know they DO. They can point out proof. They can't explain it, but there it is.

And you'd be plain crazy if you think you can laugh them into opening umbrellas in the house—or throwing endless chain letters into the waste basket.

Superstition does work, and the reason's obvious. Bad luck threats come true because we BELIEVE they will.

Belief isn't a vague quirk of the imagination—it is the most positive and powerful force in life.

You might as well put a time bomb under yourself and wait for it to explode, as to permit yourself to BELIEVE something that's discouraging or demoralizing; for that BELIEF will proceed to raise Cain as inexorably and inevitably as F. N. T.

Excludes All Else

Why? Because the moment you decide to believe something, that moment you begin to focus all your attention and energy and expectation on that thing, to the exclusion of all other issues.

Remember the old game we used to play called "Beaver"—where we'd go along the streets looking for old gentlemen with beards?

Immediately we saw beards, and nothing else but. Countless exciting and diverting objects might present themselves, but we were blind to them. We had eyes only for beards.

There's nothing chancy about it. Bad luck is a game of "Beaver." You get what you're focusing on. Also, THROUGH THE POWER OF YOUR BELIEF, you give yourself more of the same dose.

Bad luck breeds bad luck. This is partly because if you're expecting bad luck you'll pass up the chances for better breaks. Also, bad luck has inevitable consequences which produce more cussedness.

BUT, THANK HEAVEN, GOOD LUCK WORKS THE SAME WAY—AND IT CAN AND WILL START WORKING WHENEVER YOU DECIDE TO SWITCH BELIEFS AND START EXPECTING A SWELL DEAL INSTEAD OF A SOUR ONE.

"Endless Chains"—we'll always have them, for they always work. We're all running an Endless Chain of WHAT-HAVE-YOU. Into that chain we put what we believe, what we expect. Out of it comes—our destiny.

So now, just to give the theory a break, suppose you copy THIS four times and pass it on.

First Party

MANSION SCENE OF GAYETY AGAIN

By Associated Press

New York, Dec. 29—It was in the wee sma' hours that the guests went home today from the first big party in the town house of J. P. Morgan since his wife died eight years ago, but as debutante parties go it was early.

That was the understanding the younger guests said they had, that they should leave early—and they did.

The party was for Louise Morgan, debutante daughter of the Junius S. Morgans, and eldest of the 16 grandchildren of J. P. Morgan. Her mother is the former Louise Converse of Boston.

Just as it ended early, so did the party start. Many of the elders of the 500 guests appeared at 9 o'clock last night (which, believe it or not, is early, too) and the younger generation began to appear an hour later.

For all its earliness, it was a gay event, with dancing in the library and a buffet supper served after midnight, amid decorations of Christmas trees, poinsettias, silvered cedar trees and Scotch heather, taken from the Glen Cove Morgan estate.

Within the house was a blaze of lights, but outside there was nothing to signify that the Morgans were entertaining again except a canopy from the door to the street and a red carpet covering the sidewalk. All windows were shuttered.

In the grand old manner, warm but unostentatious, there were no announcements and no lists of guests. Half of the guests were old friends of the family, but for most of the others—the youngsters—it was the first visit to the Morgan mansion.

It was not Miss Morgan's coming out; she was presented September 22 at a party in her parents' Glen Cove home, West Island. It was just a financier's fling for his granddaughter.

30 Letters Scanned, Man Guarded

A batch of more than 30 threatening letters received by Michael Lapriore of 14 Beach street, Swampscott, were again being studied by police today.

Lapriore received the letters on last March 7 when his daughter, Elsie, 10, said that she had been kidnaped by four men and held for several hours.

Lapriore has been given a police bodyguard at his own request, following his receipt of a letter threatening him with being kidnaped and killed. The letter is signed "Jack Imperial."

Last March, the disappearance of Miss Lapriore created a sensation, but the investigation was later dropped by Swampscott officials, who said they believed that she had fabricated the entire affair.

The handwriting on the new note will be compared with the others, only one of which was connected with the Lapriore case, but all of which were written, apparently in the same hand, threatening similar violence.

Parties for Them at White House

By Universal Service

Washington, Dec. 29—Peals of childish laughter and the patter of tiny feet echoed through the great East Room of the White House.

The executive mansion for the afternoon at least was presided over by the Roosevelt grand-children, Sistie and Buzzie Dall and little Sara Roosevelt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt of Boston, who were hosts at a children's Christmas party.

Sixty children were present dressed in their best. Their behavior was all that could be desired.

They shrieked in rapture at a wonderful marionette show, received presents from a huge Christmas tree, and were served supper. The guests were at three tables, Sistie being hostess at one, and Buzzie and Sara at the others.

The supper of cereal, creamed chicken, string beans, milk, ice cream and cake, was quite the high spot of the whole party.

Sistie, of course, had the largest table; Buzzie the in between one, and Sara a wee tabe suited to her three years. Both Sistie and Buzzie had invited their whole classes at school.

CAPITAL 'GOES COLLEGIATE'; HUB DEBS AT ROOSEVELTS' DANCE

By Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 29—A week-end house party in the White House for friends of the younger Roosevelts gave a collegiate atmosphere today to the staid executive mansion.

Ten visiting girls and 13 boys from Eastern states arrived to attend a dance tonight, which the President and Mrs. Roosevelt are giving for their sons, Franklin, Jr., and John, Harvard students.

The girls are quartered in the executive mansion itself and the boys are in a hotel across the street.

Honor guests for the occasion are Barbara Cushing, whose sister is wife of the President's son, James, and Miss Jane Matineau, whose mother is the President's first cousin.

The Misses Cushing and Matineau will receive with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the dancing party, the first young girls to be so honored since the family entered the White House.

The President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, also will attend. The other out of town girls are Elizabeth Ingersoll, Pennilyn, Pa.; Priscilla Weld, Brookline, Mass.; Susan Stackpole, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.; Margaret Delano, New York; Ethel Du Pont, Greenville, Del.; Harriet Jackson, Providence, R. I.; Louise Mead, New York city, and Silvia Redmund, New York city.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. John Roosevelt

The visiting boys were Charles Thieriot, Jr., Townsend Wimmill, Walter Coleman, Dana Hardwick, Eldridge Jackson, Peter Wick, William Lovering, Charles Symington, Hamilton Hadden and Nelson Pell, all of Cambridge, Mass., and John Work, New Haven; Newton Cutler, Princeton, N. J., and Robert Delano, New York city.

President Teases Wife--- Best Dressed Woman!!

By Universal Service

Washington, Dec. 29 — Mrs. Roosevelt admitted she is downright irked about being classed among the best dressed women of the land.

Pres. F. D. Roosevelt

Ever since the newspapers printed the story the First Lady has been "kidded" unmercifully by the members of her family, she declared at her press conference.

The President has had a twinkle in his eye and has let out little remarks such as "and what is the best dressed woman wearing this afternoon?"

As for the younger members of the family, who have always held that Mrs. Roosevelt took but little interest in clothes, they have had a grand time over the story. Said the First Lady:

"Have I been teased about that story? Really, it was just too much."

'Are Flatheads Great in Love?

Yes—and No

MOVIE STARS BARE SOULS ON SUBJECT

By International News Service

Hollywood, Dec. 29—Is a flathead romantic? Or is he not?

Debate on this question waxed warm in Hollywood today.

Dr. Ida Spellman, librarian of the British Phrenological society said a "flathead," which is her quaint professional term for a short, thick person with a receding forehead, was a "poor matrimonial risk."

Dr. Louis J. Karnosh, Cleveland, O., psycho-pathologist, was kinder to the "pinkies," as he said they are known.

"They are naturally kindly and comfortable people," said Dr. Karnosh. "They make the best lovers."

What-a-Man Fields

Anyway here's how they reacted in Hollywood today:

W. C. FIELDS—Man and child, for 20 years I have been crying for recognition as the great blond Latin lover. I knew I had it in me if I ever could make the weight. I had the will, the flat head and the fat head. And now I thank my psycho-pathological friend, Dr. Karnosh, for his illuminating discovery.

JIMMIE "SCHNOZZLE" DURANTE—Am I mortified? Me, the great lover! Long heads or flatheads have nothing to do with it. Dr. Karnosh is wrong. It's the long-nosed fellows who are the soul of romance.

EDDIE CANTOR (in a cable from London)—Is Doug Wood—Pickford wire me immediately latest dope on flathead controversy. Shall I come home as I am to my family, or do I need alterations?

JACK OAKIE—I can't take sides until I have my own head measurements taken, because I am the world's greatest lover.

Boy, Oh Boy!

MAE WEST—Oh, well, heads are not everything.

GROUCHO MARX—Long, lean, long-headed men are the best lovers, because they slip into nail open doors without letting in a cold draught, and a woman can always rest a cup of coffee on a short flatheaded man.

CHICO MARX—Cupid is no skyscraper, and probably is a flathead; that's my answer to the long, lean school for romance.

HARPO MARX—I'm for tall, long headed girls. They have helped me a lot by reaching for bottles off shelves and holding me up in their arms to see parades.

ANN SOTHERN—Tall, slim, long-headed men are the great lovers, and have always been so depicted. No little flathead is going to get on his stepladder and make love to me.

STEFIN FETCHIT—I'm long-headed, but not romantic. Just me. So where does that put me?

ALICE FAYE—A girl has a hard time deciding these days whether she likes long-headed or flat-headed men—so few of the men nowadays being polite enough to remove their hats.

HUGH O'CONNELL—If you must call me a flat-head, smile.

FREEZING

DUE IN WAKE OF SLUSH

Wet feet this evenin' and frost-bitten ears on your Sunday morning stroll was the weather man's promise to Bostonians today.

But lest they grumble against sleet and slush, he pointed out that the mercury stood at 34 above today compared to the record low of 18 below zero just one year ago.

The temperature, however, is expected to dip into the middle or lower 20s tonight and stay there tomorrow. There are 26.7 inches of snow at Pinkham Notch, N. H., for those who are eager to try out Christmas skis.

McINTYRE

New York Day by Day

New York, Dec. 29—The tragedy of a lost manuscript spangles the horizon of every writer and is a horror few escape. Fannie Hurst's experience was singularly poignant.

She had given the first and only draft of a just completed tome to a plodding highly commended typist of the tenements.

A few days later she dropped around to see how the work was coming on. The flat was empty and there was no trace of the occupant.

After the first wave of panic, she settled down to a grim fine-combing of the neighborhood—the janitor, the neighbors, the grocer, the corner cop.

An expressman remembered taking some things to Simpson street in the Bronx, the number he forgot.

O. O. McIntyre

The novelist began a house to house search of Simpson street, lasting many days. In one apartment house she learned a woman had moved in and the next day they had taken her away a raving maniac. A return attack.

Miss Hurst forced her way into the apartment. In the jinkie-jumble of an old wash-tub she found a few scattered pages. Plunging deeper she found the rest badly torn, smeared.

She salvaged them and fled. The rescued pages were probably her most important work, the novel the world knows as "Lummox."

Heavenly Hash

Something should be done about hash in New York. Something to lift it out of its lunch wagon, dirty spoon yesterday decadence to top the embossed menus of exclusive cafes.

Sizzling hot hash in a ruset crusty mound illuminated by a sunset glow of shimmery poached eggs is the most genuinely American and tasty dish we have.

Cold out of the ice box on a hunger midnight—and with a pinch from an elbow of yellow cheese and a tankard of dog's nose is a chink of heaven. The pimacea for what poets call bulimia!

That saucy peek into a harum-scarum theatrical boarding house in the 40's that "Ladies' Money" in a brief run gave us was a perfect cameo for those of us who dwelt in the lush brownstone gloom.

The bevy of vaudeville team, the petite poupee of the pavements, the track tout and hiding gangster parade in twenty shuffle. Also the optimist of the ever losing dice game, tied to the blonde and shrewish harpy, who moans:

"I didn't know I married Scotland Yard!"

In our theatrical boarding house in 51st street a fellow whose sudden vaudeville success was known as "Toots." We learned he was an ocean greyhound, a card shark of the finest. Thus his absences were professional.

Years later as I stood at the rail at Cherbourg he muttered up the gangplank and out of the side of the mouth as he passed clipped: "So you, Mr. and Mrs. Jeffreys!"

He was the only man I ever knew who lived entirely by wits. Something perverse perhaps in my make-up but I know of no one I admired so secretly.

One wonders what, in the world shake up, happened to these trans-Atlantic gamblers. They lived so utterly Nietzschean, hard and dangerously, in a world of many cowards.

Our Boarding House

From those dim days, too, another nebulous figure blows across the latitudes. He was a lightning calculator who lived next door but one down the gas jetted hall.

At night he went forth with his valise to display his wizardry under the flare of a banjo torch in Columbus Circle. All a prelude to hawking tracts on the art of getting on.

To each purchaser he presented a "gen-wine" Brazilian diamond.

One night I joined the crowd around. Without appearing to notice me, he interpolated his spiel with running fire remarks about the people of our boarding house with especial barbs for the frowsy gossip who was our landlady.

I felt the puff of the divine afflatus a flapper might receiving a special bow over the footlights from John Barrymore.

Cambridge City Councillor John W. Lyons, who is expected to be president of the council for 1935, will act as mayor while Mayor Richard M. Russell, recently elected to Congress from the 9th district is in Washington, it was indicated today.

Mayor Russell, in announcing that he would not relinquish his post in Cambridge while serving in Congress, said that he would thus be saving the city the expense of a special election, which would cost at least $10,000.

Special elections, he said, would delay the submission of the 1935 budget.

The Bigelow Mystery

Nears End

CANAL BODY TO BE FREED BY TONIGHT

Windsor Locks, Conn., Dec. 29—By tonight authorities believe they will know, if the body encased in ice in the "sucker" of the canal here is that of Dr. George H. Bigelow, missing director of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

The water in the canal has gone down 22 inches under the draining operations.

Working under floodlights, a crew of men will turn live steam, forced through hoses, onto the ice holding teh body a prisoner.

The job of freeing the corpse will be one that will call for several hours of steady work.

Anesthesia tordina may be called into play to free the left leg of the body, believed held by the mechanism of the "sucker."

Sergeant J. Warren Toelken of the Massachusetts state police, here with fingerprints of Dr. Bigelow, will immediately take prints from the hands of the dead man.

Gashes on Head

The body is now held by a chain and a rope, attached to a wrist and leg of the body.

Dr. E. F. Carniglia, medical examiner for this district, has declared the body is that of Dr. Bigelow. At the risk of his own life, Dr. Carniglia descended into the "sucker," a caisson that houses mechanism controlling draining of excess canal water into the Connecticut river.

At the same time, the medical examiner advanced information that sheds first light on how the missing Dr. Bigelow—if the body is his—may have met death.

Dr. Carniglia said that deep gashes on the head and the extended left arm of the body were probably caused by some agency other than action of the water alone. He said that probably before the body went into the water the bruises or cuts had been sustained.

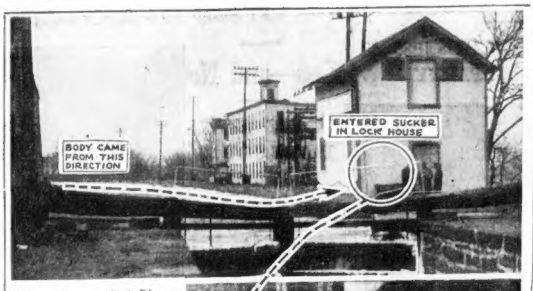
Since the New Haven railroad bridge is less than a mile north from here, police thought today that the man in the "sucker," who may be Dr. Bigelow, leaped or fell from a New York train.

They point to the girders on the bridge to explain the wounds. They point to the extended arm as natural to a person falling from a height.

On Same Route

Dr. Bigelow, on the day of his disappearance, had been planning to go to New York to address a medical meeting there. He was last seen definitely in Framingham.

They reason that if he took a train from Framingham, such a train would pass over the Windsor Locks bridge en route to New York.



Where Connecticut River trapped the mystery body which may be that of Dr. George H. Bigelow.

Police today were draining water from this "sucker" in the locks at Windsor, Conn., to reach the ice-encased body which observers believe is that of the missing head of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Giant Merger Law Set

Washington, Dec. 29—A law to permit one of the most tremendous mergers ever conceived will be recommended to Congress, the Washington Post says, by the Federal Communications Commission.

It would permit a consolidation of all wire, telegraph, cable and wireless services controlled by American interests.

The recommendation, to be made before February 1, will bear, the paper asserts, at least the tacit approval of President Roosevelt.

Though permissive in character, the proposed legislation is declared to reflect the policy of the Roosevelt administration. Officials favoring it argue that it would not only improve service but that a co-ordinated communications system would be found valuable in time of war.

Waiving the anti-trust laws, the legislation would make the following companies eligible to join: International Telephone and Telegraph Company, which controls the Postal Telegraph Company; R. C. A. Communications, Inc., and Western Union. L. T. & T. operates also in both the field of cable and radio, the R. C. A. radio networks spread to about 40 countries and Western Union, besides its great telegraph system, has a wide cable service.

Worst Storm in Career, Hero Skipper Says

Six days late after battling Atlantic gales, the American Trader docked today at East Boston.

The ship was under command of Quincy's famed hero captain, Giles C. Stedman. It was Captain Stedman, who nearly a year ago while in command of the American Merchant, rescued 22 men from a foundering British ship.

Captain Stedman said, however, that this was the worst crossing he had ever made. The only complaint the 15 passengers had to make was they were unable to be home for Christmas.

Included in the passenger list was Captain Stedman's two sisters, the Misses Mary and Alice, also of Quincy.

Describing the intensity of the gale, the captain said:

"At one time the ship steamed only 60 miles in 24 hours."

During the crossing, Captain Stedman said the radio operator reported two distress signals.

"I was about to proceed to one of the distress ships when word was received that a sister ship arrived at her side. The other ship was taken in tow to Halifax we learned.

After unloading part of the cargo and disembarking 10 passengers, The American Trader, left for New York.

Norton in Veiled Rap At Ely Police Action

A veiled reference to Governor Ely's appointment of a new police commissioner was made today by Councillor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park, as the City Council held its last meeting of the year and then adjourned to the Parker House for lunch. Said Norton:

"In November, 1910, Eugene Foss was elected Governor by 33,000 votes. Stephen O'Meara was then police commissioner and his term expired in May. It was suggested he resign and then be reappointed for another term of five years. To this, O'Meara replied:

"'Resign and be re-appointed so as to thwart the appointive powers of the in coming Governor? That would be contemptible!'

"But Foss did reappoint him."

Chief business of the session was the passage of a petition to Mayor Mansfield, asking him to reconsider his veto of a council order providing for a new playground in East Boston.

Congratulations were officially extended to Councillor John F. Dowd, of Roxbury, who served as president of the council this year. Indications are that Dowd will be succeeded by John I. Fitzgerald, of the West End.

Who Let Him In?

A Communist—by his own admission—John Strachey, English author and lecturer, arrived in this country on Tuesday.

He had hardly stepped ashore from the steamship Aquitania when he said of President Roosevelt and the latter's program, according to the New York Times—

"He is politically clever but the inevitable results will be disastrous."

Asked for his views as to the future, he replied, "there will either be Communism or chaos."

This very undesirable alien effected a landing in this country for the purpose of giving a series of forty lectures in our principal cities.

The question at once arises—WHO LET HIM IN? How did he CRASH THE GATE?

The poor tangle-bearded illiterate who seeks our shores to vent his malice against all governments, including our own, is promptly excluded or expelled under the provisions of the federal statute passed June 5, 1920, chapter 251 of volume 41 of the public laws of the United States.

What is there about this present visitor which puts him in a different category?

The Communists now awaiting deportation at Ellis Island in most cases found a city policeman an inspirable obstacle to their plans. They only aimed to wage furtive war against society—sticking to cover and running from pursuit.

They were NOT booked up by any agency to give FORTY lectures on their Communist beliefs, in as many of our principal cities throughout the land!

Have our immigration officials been asleep at the switch?

Can a slick customer like Mr. John Strachey, almost simultaneously with his apparently illegal entry into this country, affront our President, outrage our hospitality and fare forth on a country-wide tour of criticism and assault upon our institutions and the foundations upon which our government rests,—AND GET AWAY WITH IT?

A very clear duty rests upon our immigration authorities and the officials who guard our gateways.

This man should be ordered to leave the country at once, with deportation, as the law provides, as the instant alternative!

combine the Socialist and Communist parties for mass action.

Richard Babb Whitten of New Orleans, national chairman the past year of the Socialist branch in the colleges, said:

"I am also a member of the revolutionary policy committee of the party. This is the organization within the party that is ready to combine with the Communists for a mass attack if it becomes necessary to overthrow the present order by force.

"We are making great headway in the colleges. Our membership today among the students is double what it was a year ago. We expect to make much progress in enrolling the students in the revolutionary organizations the coming year."

Strike Planned

Much of the time was consumed in pledging the students to oppose preparedness and sign up to refuse to fight for this country if it should become involved in another war.

Joseph Lash, delegate from Columbia University, New York, was active in this preparation. Asked if he was equally as opposed to Soviet Russia building up a great armed force, he replied:

"They're different; they've got something to fight for over there."

Al Hamilton, recently expelled from the University of California for refusing to take military training, was named head of the organization for the ensuing year, with Joseph Lash of Columbia, secretary.

The convention called for a strike of radical students in all American colleges for April 5 as a protest against war and military training in the schools.

Flay Hearst Press

Following is the text of the resolutions adopted by the national convention of the Student League for Industrial Democracy, the socialist propaganda body in American colleges, at Northwestern University, condemning the Hearst newspapers for printing news of radical activities in the schools:

"In the fight of American students for a peaceful world and against impending Fascism, Enemy Agent No. 1 is the Hearst press. Yet unmindful of the Chicago Tribune, the Los Angeles Times and other reactionary organs, we will vigorously press our fight against the primary propaganda agents of American Fascism—the newspapers of William Randolph Hearst.

"We are unalterably opposed to international war. The Hearst press incessantly promotes international ill will, suspicion and hatred; it misrepresents the plans and purposes of other peoples; it daily defames the Soviet Union; it has lent aid and comfort to jingo elements urging preparation of the machinery of slaughter for another war.

"We are unalterably opposed to Fascism in all nations. By praise of European Fascist governments and especially by the recent editorial indorsement of Fascism here 'if necessary,' the Hearst Press has assumed the leadership of the drive of desperate capitalism to keep going for a while at the expense of those who toil.

"The Hearst Press has pretended to be a champion of the American Constitution. In action it has made a scrap of paper of the guarantees of free speech, free press and free assembly.

"It has indorsed violence as a means of disrupting the meetings against war or for academic freedom called by students of American colleges. It has incited Fascist-Vigilante bands to attack students whose political opinions it did not approve.

Call for Boycott

"In view of these facts, we call upon American students and faculties to exert every effort to boycott the Hearst press. We call upon college editors and sport writers to withdraw all support from the Hearst International News Service.

"We call upon students to solicit their families and friends to cancel subscriptions to the Hearst publications. We call upon all students to use their influence in class and church and field to see to it that the American people recognize for what he is—the errand boy of the war-makers.

"As we resist war and work for peace; as we resist Fascism and work for a co-operative commonwealth; as we try to perpetuate the revolutionary principles of the Declaration of Independence and resist the encroachments upon the bill of rights, so must we now resist this instigator of violence, promoter of Fascism, agent of reaction—the Hearst press."

RED ENEMY ACTIVE IN OUR SCHOOLS

Fr. Corrigan Says

(This is the first of a series of articles on Red Revolutionary Communism written for the Boston Evening American by The Rev. James J. J. Corrigan, S. J., professor of ethics and social science at Boston College.)

By REV. JAMES J. J. CORRIGAN, S. J.
Noted Educator and Professor of Ethics and Social Science at Boston College

Copyright, 1934, for the Boston Evening American

The organized Red propaganda in American schools, colleges and universities is perhaps the most vicious part of the Red activities in America.

Our educational institutions are permeated with Red ideas, taught and advocated by treasonable professors and instructors who hesitate even to take an oath of allegiance to the American Constitution.

We have permitted Red Communism to lift its head under the mistaken guise of open mindedness, liberalism and toleration.

Rev. J. J. J. Corrigan

Destructive forces are operating now in our American schools, who invoke the name of liberty, but whose object is not to make men free, but to oppress; not to establish the self government of the people, but the dictatorship of a class.

Many teachers in our educational institutions have failed not only to preserve our national ideas, but are giving active support to agencies that plan the downfall of our Republic and its Constitution.

The traitor professors and teachers appeal to academic freedom, just as the Red agitators appeal to freedom of speech.

But, academic freedom is a very different thing from academic license, just as freedom of speech is a very different thing from license of speech.

The latest group to make this appeal to the bogey of academic freedom is a group of 20 New York professors. They charge "Red baiting" of American college professors by the Hearst newspapers.

Dr. George S. Counts of Teachers' College, Columbia University, is especially alarmed and has appealed to the McCormack congressional committee for an investigation.

Butler's Views

Dr. Counts should interview Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of his own university, who might enlighten him on the real meaning of academic freedom.

Dr. Butler holds that the term has been abused often. The words do not imply freedom to act "in contempt of the accepted standards of morals and good standards," nor does Dr. Butler approve of attempting to let young students undertake a comparative study of "Despotism, Democracy, Communism or Fascism."

Dr. Butler rightly says:

"No people can ever dream of permitting their government to maintain elementary and secondary schools at public cost and at the same time allow to be taught in these schools that which undermines the government upon whose support the schools themselves rest.

"One who will not, nor who cannot conform to this basic requirement of social order, has no place in the teaching force of a tax supported school."

Dr. Butler should have added, "nor in any American school public or private."

Public in Dark

These worried professors should be asked under oath by the McCormack committee the following questions:

"Do you believe that academic freedom gives you the right to teach in such a way as to advocate Red revolutionary doctrines in our American classrooms?"

"Should the torch of the Red revolution be advocated in the United States?"

"Do you think that intelligent Democratic citizenship can be developed from the doctrines of Marx, Lenin and Stalin?"

"Do you believe with the Supreme Court of the United States, that a state in the exercise of its police power may punish those that abuse freedom of speech by utterances inimical to the public welfare, tending to corrupt the public morals, invite to crime, or disturb the public peace?"

"Finally, do you believe with the Supreme Court that a state may punish utterances endangering the foundation of organized government and threatening its overthrow by unlawful means?"

"In short, does academic freedom deprive a state of the primary and essential right of self-preservation?"

The pertinence of these questions to Red propaganda in our schools is evident at once and will become more evident in the next few months.

The people of the United States are woefully in the dark about the extent of Red activity among the American youth.

Reds are working in the colleges. People are being influenced not so much by the ordinary Red agitator, but by skilled, learned, plausible, atheistic organized revolutionists who play their part in the role of students, professors and instructors in the educational institutions of our country.

On the school playground and on the college campus our youth are being steadily robbed of their faith in American traditional ideals and sapped of their loyalty to the American constitutional form of government and its institutions.

The language of God is obliterated from their minds by atheistic professors and disrespect for law, order and morality is being encouraged even in our grammar schools.

The time is ripe for action against this pernicious attempt to mislead our youth. The Red professor in the American classrooms who is teaching atheism and treason to the immature minds of our youth is easily PUBLIC ENEMY NUMBER ONE.

REDS Blast at FASCISM

BRITON HITS HEARST

By Universal Service

New York, Dec. 29—Only by "destruction of the capitalist system" can humanity find safety today, John Strachey, radical English author, told an audience of 5500 at Mecca Temple here.

In an address devoted chiefly to an attack on Fascism, Strachey urged Communists, Socialists and all other radicals to form a united front against what he termed an "obvious movement" toward state Fascism in America.

The meeting was held under auspices of the American League Against War and Fascism.

Dr. Robert Morss Lovett of the University of Chicago, vice-chairman of the league, presided.

Bitter Blast

Introducing Strachey, Lovett made a violent attack on Theodore Roosevelt and William Randolph Hearst, accusing them of having "kindled" the Spanish-American War "for their own aims." He said:

"Hearst is the man who has stirred up and encouraged Fascist activities in the United States.

"Since Fascism means force, I brand William Randolph Hearst as the greatest criminal at present in America, because in encouraging Fascism he is fomenting war, and anyone who foments war is to be regarded as a criminal."

Strachey said:

"No one at all familiar with Europe today can deny the obvious fact that Fascism is growing, which means an explosion in the form of war almost any time."

He declared Fascism has failed to make good on its claims for economic betterment, calling it "an instrument of capitalism to force workers to work at a low wage and pay high prices."

One person in the audience asked him how the radicals could meet the attacks on them in the Hearst newspapers. He answered:

"By organizing against them."

In all Fascist countries, Strachey said, it is against the law to protest about pay or hours. He added:

"Capitalism throughout the world today is like a cornered beast, fighting for existence."

"Last summer Europe was within an ace of war, with the three Fascist nations, Italy, Austria and Germany, involved."

AID For All JOBLESS

PRESIDENT LAYS PLANS

By Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 29 —The Roosevelt administration, some high officials forecast today, will ask Congress for power to put all "employables" on the relief rolls to work.

At present their number is estimated at 3,500,000 to 4,000,000.

It was believed, however, that an elastic program would be sought, with the government leaving to private business as much of this job-creating task as it can assume.

Though there were indications that the plan Roosevelt will lay before the Congress convening next Thursday has not been completed, certain officials who declined to be quoted by name saw the administration moving toward a "jobs-for-all" goal.

The Washington Post, placing the number of unemployed workers involved at 4,000,000, said the plan was to give them jobs "on projects financed in whole or part by the government."

As the President drafted his message to a session which will deal with so many momentous issues that leaders expect it to last well into next summer, it became known that one project being weighed by the chief executive is to increase the membership of the Civilian Conservation Corps from its present 250,000 to 1,000,000.

Robert Fechner, director of the CCC, declined comment on this, but he had said previously that the National Forest Service and the Park Service had estimated there was enough work of the nature done by the corps to keep a million men busy for 50 years.

Among other plans placed before the President was one to put many idle to work eliminating grade crossings.

Women Sought Who Aided Paroled Antique Thief

Four women whom Chester W. Campbell, paroled antique thief, said were accomplices in the disposal of the valuable furniture Campbell admitted he stole a second time, were sought today by Boston detectives.

Campbell, who was arrested Friday night, went on a tour of Beacon Hill antique shops with policemen. He pointed out many of the pieces he is alleged to have stolen. More than $20,000 worth is involved.

H. W. Estabrook, whose summer home is in Paxton, was called from his large Worcester department store to identify some of the merchandise recovered. He picked out several items without hesitation. Then he said:

"In 1927 these self-same antiques were admittedly stolen by this man, and he was sent to jail for it and paroled in 1932. I hope they keep him there this time."

Campbell was granted his freedom by the State Parole Board on January 26, despite the fact that he had a record of at least eight court appearances and one prison break against him, it was learned today.

He also had been an inmate of the Elmira, N. Y., reformatory.

He was freed after serving six years of a nine to 12 year term in Norfolk Prison Colony.

Futhermore, Campbell was permitted to take up his residence in New York on September 27 of this year. He has a mother living in Boston.

According to his record, he escaped from Norfolk on December 4, 1930, but voluntarily returned the next day.

1000 MORE JOBS LOOM IN LYNN SHOPS

Prospect of the re-employment of 1000 skilled workers immediately and 5000 a short time later, loomed in Lynn, when Charles J. Goldman, representing several manufacturers of shoes and shoe boxes, reported that four such companies may move back.

The companies, who left the city for smaller communities in Maine and New Hampshire some months ago, will return, he said, if suitable agreements can be reached with labor.

WEINER WINS

Ralph E. Weiner, of Lynn, won his fight in the Salem superior court to remain on the payroll of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn.

Judge Harold Williams, in a jury-waived trial, decided against a petition by Arthur W. Pinkham, in the name of the medicine company, that Weiner be enjoined from seeking reinstatement as an employe. The decision automatically dismissed a suit by Pinkham to force Weiner to resign.

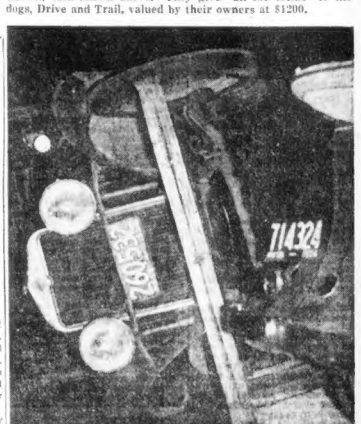
A safe stolen from the South Boston High school about a month ago was recovered today by police in a field in the outskirts of Woburn.



Two persons were near death in a hospital today after these automobiles had collided at Grant and Central streets, Natick. One car was driven by Charles D. Chilson of Grant street, Natick; the other by William L. Taffe of River street, Wellesley Hills. The injured were passengers in Taffe's machine. They were James Moore and Francis Sullivan, both of Wellesley Hills. Chilson and his wife, who was with him, were unhurt, as was Taffe. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Helen Puts Off the Sea Trip

Wife in Custody

Second 'Blessed Event' Changes Voyage Plan

by BEATRICE LUBITZ

Helen tells Walter of the approach of a second "blessed event."

CHAPTER XXXVII

"I want to go to Poland," Anastasia insisted. "I want to see my grandfather's farm in Krakow before I die."

"Do you think she could, doctor?"

"I don't know about Poland but the ocean voyage would do her a world of good and the baths at Nauheim, I think, would prolong her life."

"What do you think, Irene?" Walter asked after the doctor had gone.

"I think it's a good idea and she's so set on going."

"Oh, but across the ocean," Agnes shuddered. "I'm afraid of the sea. I'd hate it."

"You got a white liver," Anastasia announced dryly from her chair which they had believed was out of earshot.

Agnes complained in a martyred voice, "That's how she always picks on me."

The five Rileys were there this Sunday afternoon. Each one had just dropped in for a minute to see their mother and to hear the doctor's verdict on Anastasia's sudden desire to go to Europe.

"It will be an awful job to get her there," Stella pondered.

Consults Watch

"Why? The chair can be wheeled and the nurse can go along."

"She can't go alone, with just the nurse, Ethel. Someone's got to go with her."

"Not I." Agnes shrugged. "We get along like cat and dog. Besides, I wouldn't risk my life on a boat."

Irene consulted her diamond watch. "Hurry up and get this settled. I have a dinner party."

"Be quiet, Irene, please. Now one of us has got to take her. Good Lord, mamma's got five children and not one of them will take her to Europe when her very life is at stake."

"Can the heroics, Walter. What about you?"

Walter looked startled at his sisters.

"The business got along while you and your wife lolled at Palm Beach or Miami Beach, whenever it was."

Walter stared at Irene. His face set. "Why not? I've never been to Europe. Helen and I had a good time in Florida. It was Miami Beach, my dear."

"It'll be a wonderful trip for Helen and me. Okay, mama? You're going with us," Walter decided.

"I don't see why you have to take Helen," Stella snapped. "What about the baby?"

"We'll take the baby too."

"It's ridiculous, Walter. Mama can't be bothered with a baby."

"Mama won't see the baby." An exultant gleam came into Walter's eyes. "Mama has her nurse and we'll take Fredericks."

"What's the matter with you?" Walter asked, trying to conceal a smile.

"It isn't fair," Agnes persisted doggedly.

"What isn't fair?" Walter asked pleasantly.

"Oh, nothing. Some day you'll see that I was right."

"She's nuts," Stella shrugged, turning away.

"Don't Brag"

"At least I can hold on to my husband."

Stella flushed. "Don't brag," she snapped.

Walter could hardly wait to tell the news to Helen.

"When do we sail?" She waved a handful of socks that she was repairing.

"I knew you'd be pleased."

"Pleased! I'm thrilled! Oh, Walter, isn't it marvelous! We'll be alone together!"

"Well, mama'll be with us," he hesitated.

"Mama's all right," she conceded. "Mama's fun! Oh, we'll all have fun!"

Walter kissed her. "You darling, you angel! My own sweet blessed girl!"

There followed a month of fevered preparation. They were booked to sail on March twenty-ninth, when one day, about the second week in March, Helen's suspicions were suddenly and ruthlessly confirmed as she became nauseated over her breakfast.

"What is it, darling?"

"I'm going to have another baby."

"Do you mind, Helen darling?"

"Not awfully. I think it's rather nice. Do you?"

"I'll Call Doctor"

"Mind!" He caught her to him and they waltzed decorously out of the bathroom while he sang the "Blue Danube" badly off key.

"I was sick like this when Gracie came, too. Oh, Walter, do you think I can go?"

"I don't see why not," Walter grinned; he had been in excellent spirits ever since the Eluhopean trip was decided on. Everybody'll think you're seasick."

"Oh, Walter," Helen laughted, then as if a flash of lightning struck her, she doubled up with pain.

Walter and Mamie got her into bed. "I'll call a doctor," Walter rushed to the phone. "You never had this before."

"Call Dr. Morgan, Walt," she gasped. "He'll know."

Without argument Walt phoned downstairs and a few minutes later Dr. Morgan was there.

"I think it was just an attack of indigestion. I'll give her a harmless pepsin-bismuth preparation. I guess you're going to have a baby all right, Mrs. Riley," he announced jovially.

"Do you think it's safe for my wife to undergo an ocean voyage, Dr. Morgan?"

"I don't see why not, if she's well enough."

Walter insisted on her seeing Dr. Fussnagel, the gynecologist. He said tactfully, "Dirk recommends him highly."

Helen loved him for his artfulness, "All right, dear, bring him on."

Dr. Fussnagel was a beautiful man with the whitest spats Helen carefully and wrote steadily on a had ever seen. He examined Helen large white card as she answered his questions. His decision was that Helen should not attempt an ocean voyage until the nausea was over—about two months longer—and remain under his constant care until that time.

Helen scoffed at his verdict, but as the sailing date neared she was really too miserable to go.

"I hate to leave you like this."

"Darling, you go. I'll join you as soon as I'm able and bring Gracie and Frederick with me."

"And you're sure you don't mind my going? If you do, I'll stay," said Walter.

Kisses Her Again

"No, your mother is set on it. I'll join you maybe next month."

Walter won't budge out of Nauheim until you come."

Helen was too sick to go to the boat to see them off but she and Walter had a long, tearful parting at home.

"I was just like this with Gracie, dear, and then after four months I was just fine."

He kissed her again and again. "I'll cable you from the boat and I'll write you every day, dearest."

"And I'll join you the moment I'm able!"

Except for an occasional luncheon or tea with Dirk, Helen avoided any contact with the others. After a week she began to feel less and less harrowed and by the end of the second week, she was making plans to join Walter.

"I'll give myself four weeks just to make sure," she told Mrs. Terhune with whom she was having afternoon tea.

"I think that's wise, dear; beside the sea won't be so rough."

"Yes. Walt was glad I wasn't on that boat. He said they had a wretched crossing."

Helen rose to go as it neared six o'clock.

"Why don't you wait a bit? Dirk will surely drop in as he comes uptown and then you can get a ride uptown in his taxi."

"Are you sure he's coming, Mother Terhune?"

"He never misses a day."

"Well then, I may as well wait. I want to see him about my jewelry insurance."

"I hear him now."

Dirk came in and kissed his mother. "Hello, Nell, I had a hunch I'd find you here."

"Yes, this is my second home. Every time I go out, I just naturally seem to gravitate here."

When Helen and Dirk reached Helen's house, it was after six.

Roasting Meat

"Have you time to come up and get my policies, Dirk; it will only take a minute."

"I think so. We don't usually have dinner till seven."

Helen opened the door with her key. The savory smell of roasting meat met them.

"Mmm . . . smells good."

"Doesn't it? Wait, Dirk, it's in my bedroom."

"Hello," called Dirk, "look who's here, Hello, Agnes. I didn't see you. How are you and Stella's Carl?"

"We are well, thank you." Agnes' lips were compressed in a white line.

"Does Helen know you're here, Nell?"

"She's getting out some policies that fall due while she'll be gone. I'm taking care of them for her."

"Oh. I see." Her voice was poisonous.

Helen came into the living room. "Oh, hello, Agnes. What a pleasant surprise. How are you? Here, Dirk, thanks a lot for taking these off my mind."

"Glad to do it. Well, I must go on. Good-bye, Helen. Good-bye Agnes, we don't see much of you these days. Where are you keeping yourself?"

Agnes shook hands limply. With a cheerful wave, Dirk was gone.

"You'll stay for dinner, Agnes?"

"No, I just came for a minute. I don't think you should go to Europe to meet Walter, Helen."

"Why, Agnes, I have our passports and our passage is booked."

"You're going to have a baby, aren't you?" Agnes reminded her tersely, her lips white.

"Why, yes."

"And you're not afraid to go to Walter?" she panted, her voice shaking.

"Why, no dear, I'm not afraid. I know you don't like the ocean but I really love it. I have no fear."

Mystery With Laughs Laurels to Star Team

Film Novelty

JACK SIDNEY'S BILL PLEASES

Co-stars of sophisticated comedy, who first won their partnership laurels with movie fans in "The Thin Man," Myrna Loy and William Powell, once more team up for mystery with laughs in "Evelyn Prentice," current screen attraction at Loew's Orpheum.

In a drama that brings Miss Loy to the defendant's box accused of murder, "Evelyn Prentice," based on a novel by W. E. Woodward, has plenty of novelty and some brand new tricks in its plot. Miss Loy and Mr. Powell are once again the friendly married couple, but by the time fate and gossip play their cards for them, there's plenty of excitement in their lives. Isabel Jewell, Rosalind Russell, Harvey Stephens and Cora Sue Collins are in the supporting cast.

Jack Sidney's Samples in "A Big Little Show," which takes headline honors on the new Orpheum vaudeville bill, is a brightly staged and paced Broadway musical revue, with a trio of engaging youths named Tom, Dick and Harry, the pretty Walker Sisters, Davey Kraft, Betty Keane and Elsa Greenwell among the principals in a smart company.

Other acts billed on the program, which will be part of the holiday festivities on New Year's Eve at the midnight show are Gale and Carson in "Two Ex-Gentlemen," with songs, dances and plenty of comedy; Raymond Baird, "The Typical American," Brooks and Philton in "Cleaning Up," and Janet May as the "Aerialist Supreme."

NORMAN HEADLINES AT SCOLLAY

Headlining the New Year's week program at the Scollay Square, Al Norman, not long ago one of the bright stars of the Earl Carroll Vanities, steps into the spotlight in "All in Fun," which lives up to and beyond its name. Mr. Norman's brand of humor is exclusive, and yesterday's audience kept calling for more and more of the Norman nonsense.

A fivesome of fast moving adagio dancers, "The Voltairs," are appropriately billed as "Harmony in Motion"; and others on the new variety bill, all of whom will be on hand for the midnight show on New Year's Eve, are Naomi Ray and Eddie Harrison in another broadly funny act called "A Pain in the Ballet;" Harriet Hutchins with Ramon Ringo in "Crazy People;" and the Three Hearts.

On the screen America's youngest sweetheart, Shirley Temple, star in "Bright Eyes," a sweet and sentimental story of a little girl who in the pet and manner of a group of transcontinental flyers, headed by Jimmy Dunne. When her mother is killed in an accident, Shirley's fate hangs between the wealthy Smythes, for whom her mother has worked as a maid, and Jimmy.

Little Miss Temple has a bit of her pretty thunder stolen away by the worst imp in the way of a child actress the screen has produced. She's Jane Withers, and between asking for machine guns for toys, plaguing everybody in sight, hanging on the grand piano with her clenched fists and generally upsetting everybody's apple cart, she's the most completely realistic youngster in the movies. Of course, Shirley's still adorable and unaffected, but this time in the best role she's had since "Little Miss Marker." Lois Wilson and Judith Allen are in the cast.

ADA BROWN HAS NEW MELODY

By MARTIN HANNON

From Ponta Miguel to Frisco, from Frisco to San Diego, and Rosita still pursued him! And what would be a distinct pleasure to most men is a thorn in the side to William Haines, as the bad-boy of the leather-necks in the Keith-Boston's current feature, "The Marines Are Coming."

Haines is the last of that great school begun with Sergeant Quirt and Captain Flagg, a devilmay-care fellow dubbed Wild Bill Traylor, who is a general card with the ladies, a caution to his superior officers, and a waste of time to Dorothy Manning, the colonel's daughter.

William Haines

That is, she thinks so, until Bill begins to murmur of tropical gardens beneath the yellow moon. It is then that she jilts Captain Benton, as austere a young officer as only Conrad Nagel could make him. Bill has landed and has the situation almost in hand when the fiery advent of Rosita causes the blonde Dorothy to think twice before leaning into marriage with this soldiering Casanova.

Just why Bill tries so hard to escape Rosita is hard to understand, for she is played by the charming Armida, our nomination as the cutest of the current Latin-American group. But after a skirmish with some revolutionists, in which Bill and Benton, reconciled in their common danger, knock off shameful numbers of the foe, Bill surrenders Dorothy to the better man and resigns himself to the more adventurous Rosita.

Haines is as engagingly brash as ever, while tiny Armida is a more than worthy running mate. Esther Ralston and Conrad Nagel are considerably hampered by dull roles, but remain pleasant enough.

Ranny Weeks introduces another amusing bill on the Keith Boston stage this week with Ada Brown entertaining in good style in "Southern Syncopation," Virginia Bacon with Tommy Monroe and the Andrew Twins, afford more good vaudeville fare, and other acts are the popular Vicki Joyce, Joe Besser and Company, The Six De Cardoes and Foley and La Tour.

Dizzy and Daffy Dean, the much publicized brothers of organized baseball, are seen in an interesting short subject, while a color cartoon, and the current newsreel round out a pleasant and varied program.

Spalding Plays New Work At Symphony Concert

By ANN AMES

Albert Spalding, America's most celebrated violinist, appeared as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra yesterday, playing for the first time in America the Second Concerto for violin and orchestra by Karol Szymanowski, Poland's greatest living composer.

Happily the program also held stirring performances of two symphonies for, despite Mr. Spalding's virtuosity, and the interest attached to a new performance, the Szymanowski suffered sadly in comparison to the Mendelssohn "Italian Symphony," which preceded it, and the Sibelius Fifth Symphony in E-flat major, which followed it.

For the performance of the soloist and for Dr. Koussevitzky in conducting his orchestra through the involved scoring of the Concerto, only the highest praise can go. There are passages, too, of unquestionable brilliance and beauty in this new work.

The Szymanowski works are distinguished for their originality and technical proficiency, in this instance with the result that only in the announcement of the opening theme, set forth almost at once by the solo instrument, and in some of the less intricate developments, is there anything arresting in its beauty, at least for the average concert-goer.

The showy cadenza Mr. Spalding performed with miraculous ease, and throughout, played with the unostentatious and superlative musicianship which have placed him among the finest of our concert artists.

The third of the Mendelssohn symphonies, in which the composer's graceful elegance and command of structural resources are splendidly set forth, was given a memorable performance. Particularly were the stately rhythms of the Andante, based, some believe, on an old Bohemian folksong, and the purely Italian Saltarello of the final movement expertly delivered.

The program will be repeated this evening.

Special Show

A special midnight showing of Robert Flaherty's "Man of Aran" has been arranged for New Year's Eve at the Fine Arts Theater.

LAWYERS! HERE'S YOUR GOLDEN CHANCE

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Looks like we are going to have government light, heat and power at reduced rates until further notice.

So far they have taken the mountains away from the lumber companies and the rivers from the corporations. Let's start a drive to capture the highways from the hot dog stands.

A good corporation lawyer could divide the custody of the children of nature, which fathers in this proposition, "When the Mississini is normal it belongs to us. When it overflows its banks we will let you take care of it."

With the government in the light and power racket it requires a strong, silent man in the complaint department.

Midnight Shows

Out of town theaters join the parade on New Year's Eve with midnight neighborhood shows. The Oriental in Mattapan and the Strand in Dorchester will participate in the welcoming festivities for 1935, with seven acts of vaudeville featured at both houses, with George MacKinnon as master of ceremonies. "Student Tour," with Charles Butterworth and Jimmy Durante as the heroes of a college comedy, is the screen offering.

HOLLAND

Three-Hit Prediction Gains Weight

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Crassly, this column suggested a week ago that three hits might develop in the local theater over the Christmas holidays and that three hits meant a million dollars.

Perhaps the figure was a little high. But the notion was not far-fetched. Three hits (profit-makers) did develop, I think. Noel Coward's "Point Valaine," expensively produced and cast with positive profligacy in that Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne and Osgood Perkins are featured, and any one of the three should be enough to carry one show will prove a profitable venture. Whether the return will be commensurate with the talents employed and the pains taken is doubtful. That is, I doubt it.

George Holland

The Coward cult in New York will enthuse, and the followers of the three fine actors who are featured will attend. And the film magnates will outdo each other in bidding for "Point Valaine," this pillar believes.

Leslie Howard's new show, "The Petrified Forest," from all I can deduce, is a smashing success, one of those properties which will toll off its pecuniary rewards in the hundreds of thousands.

Mr. Howard will be the star of the show until June 1 only, I learn. The English actor must complete a contract calling for his appearance in nine pictures before the close of 1936. To date, he has acted in one, and Warner Brothers will be firm, good business men that the brothers are, in seeing that the contract is fulfilled.

Success of "The Petrified Forest" is cause for elation, both here and in New York. Robert E. Sherwood, perhaps the most modest of the first-line playwrights, is universally popular. Arthur Hopkins, co-owner of the show with Gilbert Miller and Mr. Howard, is beloved by everyone in the theater. His direction will prove that the Hopkins' standard of values is keener than ever, and that the Hopkins' instinct in knowing a commercial success, if the need might arise, is very, very acute after all these years.

Mr. Miller is so wealthy that columns like this, except to extend congratulations, should not be too forward when he finds another hit.

The latest of the newcoming shows is Thomas Mitchell in "Fly Away Home," at the Plymouth. Blessed with the triple-threated Mr. Mitchell, who acts splendidly, writes practically and ably, and directs like a master, "Fly Away Home" should not cause its financiers worry, from much as I gather.

"Fly Away Home," by Dorothy Bennett and Irving White, goes to New York a week from Monday. "Point Valaine" goes to Philadelphia for another week's playing, and "The Petrified Forest" goes to the Broadhurst, in New York.

All three attractions will play next week in Boston, and Blanche Ring in "Her Master's Voice" at the Hollis Street Theater completes the downtown bill-of-fare theatrically.

Marion Davies Role Chosen Star as Little Waitress

Cast Now Being Selected

"PAGE MISS GLORY" IS WARNERS' PICK FOR COMEDIENNE

By Louella O. Parsons
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 29—Here's news all Hollywood has been waiting to hear—the name of Marion Davies' first production for Warner Brothers. After a series of conferences with their new star, Jack Warner purchased "Page Miss Glory," the successful New York stage play by Phillip Dunning and Joseph Schrank, for her.

This play, in the opinion of both Jack and his brother, Harry, is perfect for the Davies type of comedy. It's the story of a press agent who enters a composite picture of different stars in a contest and wins.

In desperation he prevails upon a little waitress to pose as the girl in the phoney photograph — and that's where Marion, as the waitress, plays one of Louella O. Parsons' her typical Cinderella roles. Jack Warner said said today that an all-star cast will be selected to support Marion and that he will make a definite decision on a director within a few days.

M. H. Hoffman is bringing Lawrence Gray back to the screen. If you remember Larry in "Marianne" with Marion Davies, you will know what I mean when I say that, to my way of thinking, he has a very appealing voice and a very nice personality. But the boy couldn't get a job until Mike Hoffman gave him the lead in "Dizzy Dames," based on a story by P. G. Wodehouse. Marjorie Rambeau is the star; Kitty Kelly, Lillian Miles, Inez Courtney and Fuzzy Knight are other members of the cast.

You're going to hear Shirley Temple sing "Animal Crackers in My Soup," a little ditty composed especially for her by Ray Henderson. The former member of the Brown, De Sylva and Henderson trio, is being brought here by Winfield Sheehan to write a musical for Miss Shirley and John Boles, and other music for other pictures as well.

Chatter in Hollywood

Charles Kenyon was the most existed man in town last week. He received word that his paternal grandfather had died and left him a "shooting box" in Ireland. It sounded so grand. Then came word that the entire estate was valued at 4000 pounds, and several other heirs had already filed claims and Charlie must come to Ireland if he wanted his share.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Gossip is going the rounds that the estranged wife of a well-known comedian is making goo goo eyes at one of our better known stars; she is very pretty, too; ZEPPO MARX'S Christmas gift to MRS. ZEPPO, $2500; the boy must be doing all right; CAROLE LOMBARD and FIELDSIE, her pal and secretary, leaving January 15, for a six weeks' trip to Europe; KEN MAYNARD'S title, "Crazy People," winning the hundred dollar prize offered by Paramount for the BURNS and ALLEN picture; ERNST LUBITSCH coming up for air after reading 327 plays for MARLENE DIETRICH, to be sure he had the right one; KAY FRANCIS suffering with makeup poison, still managing to visit her director, FRANK BORZAGE, at the hospital; GEORGE BRENT, who is also working for FRANK, went along with KAY to advise FRANK to ride in planes instead of on polo ponies; the M. D. promises FRANK'S collar bone will soon be as good as new; FRED KEATING'S open house Sunday another holiday event of interest; BARBARA BEBE DANIELS and her boy friend, BEN GALLAGHER, lunching out; they were chaperoned by a couple of proud fathers, BEN LYON and SHEETS GALLAGHER; BEN limping from a torn ligament in his leg, which he received playing tennis; EDDIE SUTHERLAND fairly beaming on pretty SALLY BLANE; they were at luncheon and the races together.

FILM REVIEW

Bing Crosby's Comedy Scores Kitty Carlisle Shares

"Here Is My Heart" at Met

PHIL HARRIS AND LEAH RAY, RADIO FAVORITES, HEAD STAGE BILL

By JOYCE DANA

Melody makes the show go at the Metropolitan where the aisles and lobbies were crowded yesterday for Bing Crosby's newest picture, "Here Is My Heart," and for Phil Harris and Leah Ray, warmly welcomed by their New England radio fans.

Crooning may not be up your alley, but what it's done in the way of "vo-de-o-dough" for Mr. Crosby may best be judged from his newest film, which proves conclusively and entertainingly that the young man is a comedian as well as a crooner. If you like Bing, you'll love it.

To be sure the king of jazz (vocally, Mr. Whiteman!) has a delightfully humorous story to start with, adapted from Alfred Savoir's play, "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter." He has Kitty Carlisle, as striking and attractive a personality as any leading man could demand, as the girl of his heart. And in the supporting cast, he has some of the smoothest and sweetest comedy personalities of the screen in Roland Young (who takes too much time out between pictures), Reginald Owen, hiding once more behind a beard, Bill Frawley as a wise-cracking newshound.

The story, which isn't important, is all about a crooner who is retiring from the microphone to take care of his millions, and to cross off his list the things he has wanted to do all his life. By way of accomplishing his purpose, he buys a hotel, falls in love with an impoverished Grand Duchess, poses as a waiter and sings his way straight into her heart.

You probably have and you certainly will hear "June in January," "With Every Breath I Take," and others of the Crosby tunes.

As for Phil Harris, he quite lives up to his "So This Is Harris," picture billing, which is more than anyone could ask. He takes the edge off the master-of-ceremonies job with his ingratiating manner, and introduces among others the charming Leah Ray who couldn't sing enough yesterday to take care of the applause. Beatrice Howell's impersonations are excellent. Gregory and Raymon do stunts you wouldn't believe with everything from vacuum cleaners to saws; the Barstows in intricate toe taps, and the Borzella in the year's funniest tumbling act.

A LONG LOST FATHER IN A NEW PLAY

Thomas Mitchell, above, is the somewhat bewildered dad in "Fly Away Home," a comedy of divorce which is proving a hit on the Plymouth stage.

Howard Will Greet New Year Gaily

A midnight performance at the Old Howard will welcome in the New Year Monday night with "Flirting Females," which brings some of Boston's biggest burlesque favorites back to town in another of the Independent Burlesque shows.

The Carroll Sisters, California beauties, head the cast, and among the other girls in leading roles are Dolly Hendrix, Kay Johnson, and Dorothy De Haven. The comedy brigade is headed by Al Hillier, Bobby Vail and George Murray, with Joe Forte and Bert Saunders providing still further fun.

The feature screen attraction is "Son of a Sailor," and together with vaudeville acts and short reel comedies complete the holiday program.

Eddie Cantor Film at Bowdoin

The new program opening today at the Bowdoin Square brings Eddie Cantor in "Kid Millions," as the feature attraction of a show that offers a special holiday vaudeville bill in addition to its screen fare. Block and Sully, Ethel Merman and Ann Sothern are in the cast.

As a feature of the holiday bill an entire circus tops the vaudeville bill. A New Year's Eve Frolic will be held Monday night at midnight.

Betty Alden on 'Beacon Hill'

Many From Boston in Barbara Wendell's Bridal Party

By Betty Alden

RADIANT IN IVORY SATIN with lace, little Barbara Wendell of Chicago is being married late this afternoon in St. Chrysostom's Church, in the Windy City, to Horace Soule, son of Mrs. Horace Soule of Brookline . . . Most of the bride's Wendell and Higginson kin has journeyed to Chicago to join the fashionable company at the ceremony . . . and most of the faces in the bridal procession will be so familiar to the Bostonians they will think they are at a wedding in Emmanuel Church . . .

BARBARA WENDELL

Of course, Betty Soule, the bridegroom's sister, is in the bridal entourage, and Griselda Higginson, a cousin of the bride, is slated for an honor role . . . Alida Goodwin of Wenham, another cousin, and Mrs. Sargent Collier of Walpole have also gone out to be in the wedding party . . .

A perfect onslaught of handsome Boston ushers will seat the guests . . . Lee and Barrett Wendell, on their holidays from Harvard, will assist them . . .

Guests at Cocktail Party

AFTER THEIR SOUTHERN honeymoon, the exact destination, of course, being a deep, dark mystery, the bride and groom will make their home in Boston . . . Barbara is well known and loved by her many friends here, having been presented to Boston society several seasons ago by her distinguished grandmother, Mrs. Barrett Wendell . . . Horace has a charming Bostonian manner with which he has captivated the Chicago friends of his bride . . .

One of the nicest of the pre-nuptial parties was the cocktail party given by Freida Foltz early in the week . . . The entire Wendell family was present and many of their friends were invited to meet Barbara's fiance.

Mrs. James Russell, who is so cosmopolitan and charming that she has friends all over the world, is visiting her cousin, Russell Tyson, in Chicago, and will undoubtedly be counted among the wedding guests . . .

Howe-Bygraves Ceremony in Concord

THE H. ROBERT BYGRAVES of Concord decorated their house with white flowers and Christmas greens for the wedding this afternoon of their daughter, Miss Amy Crosby Bygraves, to Thorndike Dudley Howe, Jr. . . . The house was lighted with candles for the ceremony, which the Rev. Edward Perry Daniels read . . . Mr. Bygrave gave the bride away . . .

A tulle veil attached to a coronet of heirloom rose point lace, which was worn by the bride's grandmother and mother, and fastened at the back of the neck with a cluster of orange blossoms, which was worn by her aunt, cascaded over the bride's simple white satin gown . . . She carried white roses and lilies of the valley . . . Miss Polly Brown of Coolidge Hill road, Cambridge, wearing a distinctive costume of all white, carried an old-fashioned bouquet of variegated hues for her role as maid of honor . . .

Spencer D. Howe, of Revere street, was the best man and due to the simplicity of the wedding the usual usher corps was dispensed with . . .

Following the ceremony the bridal couple received their friends at a small reception at the Old Mill Dam in Concord . . .

The bride is a graduate of the Winsor and Bouve Schools . . . Mr. Howe, the son of Mrs. Thorndike D. Howe of Beacon Hill and the late Mr. Howe, is a graduate of Harvard, class of 1928.

Peterboro Scene of Weekend Parties

Peterboro has wakened up for over the New Year's weekend with countless young socialites from New York and Boston enjoying winter sports and house parties in the country . . . Mr. and Mrs. Horace Morison have opened their beautiful estate for a party for their daughters, whose boy friends are staying with their neighbor, Mr. Clement Lawson . . .

Joan Sagendorph

Mrs. George Sagendorph of Charles River square, with her future debutantes, Joan and Elizabeth, joined the exodus from Boston to the country and are at their Peterboro estate . . .

Another socialite has joined the legion of war story authors . . . this time a popular young bachelor who has a long list of admirers among society's fair sex . . . Norman Archibald, almost as well known here as in New York and Seattle, will have his first book published the middle of January . . . he is a brother of Mrs. Eben Draper of Hopedale who has accompanied him to Seattle to spend the holidays with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Archibald . . .

Young Folks at Symphony Concert

Yesterday afternoon Boston's music lovers had the opportunity of hearing Albert Spalding at the Boston Symphony concert . . .

One of the brightest spots in the large audience was the crimson suit of Mrs. C. Fred Cullen, trimmed with gray fur just the shade of her beautiful hair . . . Black and white was the color scheme chosen by most of the women present . . . In this fashionable group were Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Mrs. Leonard Fowler, Mrs. Franklin Hobbs, Mrs. William A. Gaston, Mrs. George Mumford, Mrs. Benjamin F. Pitman of Hollander fame, Miss Elizabeth Leland, Mrs. H. Parker Whittington and Miss Eleanor Jones, Sr. . . .

A charming trio were Mrs. Francis Sears with her two little daughters, all three in the same shade of light green . . . the large enthusiastic audience boasted many children.

Infant Saviour Guild Lecture

Passion Play Expert Will Address Meeting

MRS. WILLIAM V. McDERMOTT, president of the Guild of the Infant Savior, announces that the next regular meeting will be held in the foyer of the Copley-Plaza on Wednesday, January 2, at 2:30.

Mr. John J. Ward will give an illustrated lecture on the Passion Play of Oberammergau. Living, some weeks each summer for the past 12 years, as a member of the household of Anton Lang, the former famous Christus of the play, Mr. Ward has had a rare opportunity to become well acquainted with the characters in the great play.

Miss Martha Hurley, who is so well known for her work on the stage, in concert, and on the radio, will give interpretative renditions during the lecture.

The gold trophy award winner will be announced and the details of the recent successful supper dance and "Holiday in Normandy" will be given by Miss Mary Corcoran, treasurer.

The ushers will be in charge of Mrs. Frank Grady and Mrs. Thomas Feeney. Other officers of the association are Mrs. E. J. Donnelly, Miss Julia Pendergast, vice-president, Mrs. E. F. Goode, secretary, and Miss Mary Corcoran, treasurer.

GROUP PLANS ALL-CHAMBER PROGRAM

A COMMITTEE MEETING of the active workers on behalf of the Saturday Morning Concerts for juniors at the home of Mrs. Eliot Hubbard, Jr., in Cambridge was saddened by the news of the forthcoming departure of Mrs. Winthrop W. Spencer, who is leaving Cambridge to reside in Waterbury, Connecticut.

The committee in charge of the Saturday Morning Concerts in Sanders Theater includes Mrs. Oakes I. Ames, Mrs. George B. Beaman, Jr., Mrs. A. Sprague Coolidge, Mrs. Frederic L. Day, Mrs. Charles C. Peabody, Mrs. Grafton B. Perkins, Mrs. James S. Pray, Mrs. John H. Taylor and Mrs. Charles F. Toppan, all of whom have been meeting regularly since last spring to make this experiment in good music successful.

There will be another meeting at the home of Mrs. Perkins, 37 Fayerweather street, next Monday morning when the members will send out some new announcements about the next concert, which is to be conducted by Russell Ames Cook on January 12.

Reception Will Mark Holiday

ACCORDING TO ITS ANCIENT CUSTOM, which has honored the advent of more than fifty newborn years to Boston, the Copley Society will hold its annual reception on New Year's Day. The reception will be held at the society's home at 296 Commonwealth avenue from 4 until 6 o'clock.

President Thomas G. Frothingham and the board of governors will receive. The hostesses will be Mrs. Frederick H. Briggs, Miss Margaret Fitzhugh Browne, Mrs. Crosby A. Court, Mrs. Frederick Holdsworth, Mrs. Frank Gardner Hale and Mrs. Charles G. Schirmer.

Tea will be served and Franklin G. Field, baritone, will sing a group of songs, accompanied by Walter M. Arno. The reception is limited to members.

CAMBRIDGE

CHILDREN ATTEND SHOW

CANDY PRIZES

A GROUP OF DEBUTANTES headed by Miss Katrina Miller acted as ushers and took charge of the lucky number candies which were sold at the children's entertainment in Brattle Hall, Cambridge, this morning.

The Misses Martha Bird, Jane Whitney, Ann Gallagher, Barbara Eaton and Edith Cummin assisted Miss Miller.

The many children who attended were greatly interested in the marionette show, which presented "Jack and the Beanstalk," "Elephant's Child," "Mickey Mouse" and circus stunts.

The committee responsible for the success of the entertainment, which was for the benefit of the Scholarship Fund of Radcliffe, included Mrs. Harry F. Hartwell of Newton, chairman; Mrs. Robert M. Blackall of Milton, Mrs. Horace W. Hall of Newton, Mrs. William H. Driscoll of Belmont, Miss Margaret Stanwood of Jamaica Plain and Mrs. Erwin H. Schell of Cambridge.

Party Honors Fiancee

Holiday Fete Planned

MRS. W. P. COUES NEW YEAR'S HOSTESS

MRS. WILLIAM PEARCE COUES is giving a dual-purpose party at her home in Monmouth court, Brookline, on New Year's Day.

The first purpose of the party is to furnish entertainment for the many guests, some 150 are expected, in order that they may start the year 1935 happily and in good company.

The second purpose is to introduce Miss Mildred Davidson of Kansas City, who is the fiancee of Mrs. Coues' son, William Pearce Coues, Jr., to Mr. Coues' many friends in the younger social set.

Miss Davidson will have the opportunity of meeting Mrs. Coues' friends at a tea she is giving in her honor on January 17.

Among those who are expected to exchange good wishes on New Year's Day are Miss Dorothy Preston, Mr. Richard Penteost, Miss Harriet Sturgis, Miss Marion Ware, Mr. and Mrs. John Cunningham Willis, Mr. Robert Downing, Miss Elizabeth Hough, Miss Emilie Everett, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bourne, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Veasey, Mr. Marshall Borrows, Mr. Charles Brooks and Mr. John Wilson.

Elizabeth Josselyn Engaged

MR. HOWARD B. JOSSELYN, of Beaver Lodge, Waltham will announce the engagement of his daughter, Miss Elizabeth Mason Josselyn, to Mr. George Bailey Evans of Arlington at a dinner at his home this evening.

Miss Josselyn attended Dana Hall and the Connecticut College for Women. Mr. Evans was a student at Benshimol New Preparatory School, and was graduated from Harvard with the class of 1932. He is the son of Mrs. Mabel Bailey Evans and the late William H. Evans, formerly assistant bursar of Harvard University.

Sense and Nonsense Discussed by

DR. A. L. KINSOLVING

(Rector of Trinity Church)

Everyone who has inherited human nature must learn to ride standing up and simultaneously two steeds of different gait. For we each have a serious and a frivolous side to our nature, and we ride along on the backs of both.

We want wisdom, but on occasions we welcome folly; we have serious purposes, but we grow stale without a certain amount of the frivolous. We want to work, but all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy.

One moment a man's in deadly earnest; at another there's a roguish, mischievous motive in his heart. And the experience of human living would be infinitely the poorer unless "human nature were compact of both.

The Good Creator compacted our nature of both strands with a purpose. But a large percentage of failures and messes happen because of inability to drive both horses at once, and keep each under control in its proper place.

Some races of people seem in danger of being so serious-minded and taciturn that they miss out on most of the joy of life, and lack a sense of humor, while others have so over-developed the vein of rascality and irresponsibility in their nature as to mistake life for a perennial fiesta, and by reason of giving defective expression to the demands of life they end up trivial beings, or in a peck of trouble.

It is a fine art for anyone to know how and when to make the transition from "in gear" to "free wheeling." And at no time more than after holidays are humans more aware that they often make a sorry mess of life's sweetest privilege, by letting excitement and freedom go to their heads, and lead them into actions that cannot be reconciled with their serious intentions.

We, as a people, have got to learn how to keep our holiday amusements from tripping us and trapping us into a sad payment of damages.

Ethical codes alone are not adequate to bridge this quick transition in human nature from the mood of the serious to the mood of the frivolous. It is only religion that can hope to do the job, for this power can transform the heart within.

The marvelous liberty of the sons of God that St. Paul noticed was inaugurated when a person became a new creature, essentially changed in his motives and moods. St. Augustine counseled: "Love God and do what you like." That is too dangerous counsel for secular moralists.

When one could really love God entirely he would be free to be natural. Until then most of us must apply the curb, and heed the inner censor, else in quick moments of excitement and enthusiasm we doom ourselves to hours of regret.

Madge's Spirits Lift as Party Returns

CHAPTER 229

MY LIPS twitched as Marion saucily asked me if the older people of the wedding house party were "playing postoffice" in the darkened rooms. The mental picture she evoked of the dignified Braithwaites, the ultra modern Brixtons, the cosmopolitan Phillip Veritzen and plump Fanny Arlen playing old-fashioned kissing games banished for a few seconds that other fearsome vision of possible harm to Junior and Roderick, which had been before my eyes ever since the small boys had gone away on a moonlight drive to the beach.

"You are an impertinent chit," I told her, laughing, "and you deserve to be sent to bed without and supper."

"Oh, Mrs. Graham say not so!" Bob implored theatrically. "If she goes to bed supperless, gallantry, chivalry, or what have you, will compel Rolf and me to do without eating, also; noblesse oblige—pipe that, folks!—will keep Carol from eating, too. I warn you that you will have four near corpses on your hands if you carry out that threat."

RAID ON THE KITCHEN

"Get around to the kitchen, all of you," I ordered, "and see what you can find.

"Lie still!" my father's deep voice commanded. He was already on his way to the door, and had opened it by the time I had obeyed him and settled back into my pillows. To my surprise, when he had locked the door again he followed the young people to the kitchen and it was clearly five minutes before he again came back to the porch.

I had spent the interval in a renewal of the lively fears which had oppressed me before the arrival of the gay trailing party. I knew that my father never ate anything late at night, and I could not imagine him in the line of culinary guide to the youngsters. Had he been warning them against someone, or enlisting their aid to combat some threatened evil of which I as yet knew nothing?

By the time he came back, I had worked myself into a state closely approaching the hysteria which he had so effectually quelled a little while before. But when I saw him coming toward me with a small covered tray in his hands I realized how fantastic my fears had been.

"You ate practically nothing tonight," he said, as he set the tray upon the table and drew up a tiffin stand beside me, so I am prescribing some hot milk and crackers for you now."

"The purely feminine touch," he said "Marian sent Ronald to get it while she and Carolyn prepared the tray. Weren't they dears?"

"Yes, but you are dearer," I told him lovingly, gratefully, as I sipped the hot milk, and soon felt a modicum of confidence come back to me.

Only, why did a sly little suggestion keep poking its head up into my consciousness—the thought that my father could well have given warnings galore and enlisted the aid of all six young people, while this bedside tray had been in preparation?

PERFECT FIGURE

Gauge Ideal Weight

By THE BEAUTY EDITOR

DO YOU KNOW WHAT is the correct weight for your height and age?

It makes little difference whether your days are spent at the bridge table or over the kitchen sink, on smooth, green fairways or in the back yard hanging up the family wash—your weight should depend upon the matter of inches and birthdays.

Why is it that some women diet until they lose their looks and their happy natures and still retain double chins and girdle bulges? And others who dote on cream puffs and champagne cocktails retain lithe, graceful figures and narrow, boyish hips?

The answer is really very simple. First of all look yourself over, not with an eye on the bathroom scales, but on how tall you are and how old you are. It stands to reason that even if you are the same height as Greta Garbo you can't tip the scales around a hundred and ten if life has just begun for you—at forty.

We all know that what we do eat is quite as important as what we don't. Hence it's a bit puzzling every now and then to find a girl of twenty who should look like a healthy young animal, resembling nothing else but an overstuffed chair.

If you are decidedly overweight for your age and height—or at least you think you are—study yourself carefully in the mirror. If it's protuberances you want to lose, a diet in your case won't be of any help. You've got to work off the bulges by getting bones and muscles back to normal. Circulation and exercise should do the trick. If it's a question of excess poundage from over indulgence in food and lack of out-door exercise, then it is something else again. It is up to you to decide which method is the one to follow.

Whether or not you are interested in losing weight or keeping your weight down to normal, you'll want first of all to know exactly how much you should weigh—height, weight and age considering. This is where my weight chart comes in. It is the perfect key to correct weight and whether you be 15 or 50, you'll know exactly at what point the bathroom scales should tip.

To obtain my weight chart send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston.

It's New— "EXOTIC Naturalness"

"TO MY LADY'S EYEBROW," again is to become more than a salutation to stylized, mechanized, stilted thin lines of hair over a lady's eyes. Joan Crawford is among the leaders, with beautifully trimmed, beautifully natural eyebrows. And notice that her lips are dewy coral, instead of a gory gash. The new exoticism is naturalness comes to Losw's theaters soon.

Grecian Lines

By Jeanette MacDonald

NO FASHION to appear in a number of years has the grace and classic appeal of the tunic frock with its many effective variations. That is why, for my fall wardrobe, I chose a gown of this type fashioned for suede crepe in a rose ash shade.

The dress is extremely simple—and in this simplicity lies its charm. Its feature is the small knife pleating which adorns the low neckline and is repeated on the skirt.

It is cut on modified princesses lines and has the new formal neckline which is low in front and back. Three narrow bands of the pleating outlines this portion of the gown and continues around to the back, ending at the waist line. Simple straps hold the dress in place.

The split tunic effect is gained by means of a large square of the goods, which is brought around from the back and tied at the waist in the front.

Taffeta STEALS Daytime HONORS

By ANNICE BRINK

TAFFETA is the latest fashion rustler, stealing honors for daytime wear; this, as well as almost completely ruling evening fashion.

When printed in small neat designs, taffeta makes the not-too-frou-frou frock for luncheon or bridge, while little suits of black, brown or navy blue taffeta relieved with white—or even a complete monotone—are seen at the cocktail hour.

TAFFETA BONNETS

To match, there are some ridiculous little baby bonnets of taffeta, to be worn just hanging onto the back of the head by a hair!

A one-piece frock in two-piece effect, made of taffeta in quality fine enough to please your discriminating grandmother who "knows a thing or two about fabrics," achieves smartness without an iota of relief or contrast. It is all black, trimmed with black velvet bows. But how young! How Meg-and-Beth March!

Its round collar is ruffled by means of shirring close to the neck. A mock peplum on the tight little jacket top has a bit of shirred fullness in front. And tailored velvet bows make their way up and down the bodice in a straight line.

WINTER PASTELS

Even if you are practically penniless in resisting winter winds, the new frocks in soft pastel shades—such as two shown on this page recently—are bound to cheer you. "Turquoise Sea," "Birch in Spring," and "Dusky Tangerine" are some of the new colors.

TEA TIME

Serve Something Simple

By Martha Lee

CHILDREN home from school, friends dropping in during the day and in the evening for bridge—this seems to be the program for these busy, happy days, doesn't it. We all want to share our joy with others during this season of merriment, and there is not a more satisfying way of doing it than the cheery cup of tea. Make the repasts simple—for the spirit of hospitality is much more important.

For that cup of tea and the evening bridge, we suggest serving these gala menues, and you will enjoy your Christmas entertaining along with your guests.

TEA
I
Tea — Cinnamon Toast
II
Hot Fruit Punch
Thin Slices of Fruit Cake and Christmas Cookies BRIDGE
I
Fruit Salad with Pomegranate Honey French Dressing or Whipped Cream Dressing
Salted Wafers — Assorted Sandwiches
Coffee
II
Ice Cream Cake with Butterscotch Almond Sauce
Coffee — Mints

HONEY FRENCH DRESSING

1 tablespoon strained honey
2 tablespoons pure cider vinegar
6 tablespoons salad oil
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon paprika

Place all ingredients in a bowl and whip thoroughly with a hand or an electric beater. Pour into bottle which has a tightly fitting lid. Shake thoroughly each time before using.

POMEGRANATE HONEY FRENCH DRESSING

To Honey French dressing (see above) add two tablespoons pomegranate seeds.

ICE CREAM CAKE WITH BUTTERSCOTCH ALMOND SAUCE

Cut sponge cake into pieces, 4x2½ inch, and split. Spread the lower piece with vanilla ice cream and top with upper slice. Pour Butterscotch Sauce over top and sprinkle with salted almonds.

BUTTERSCOTCH SAUCE

¼ cup butter
1 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon vinegar
¼ cup cream

Melt butter, add sugar and vinegar, and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture bubbles up. Add the cream and let cook a few minutes longer. This sauce will be thick and creamy and never becomes grainy. When cold, thin with a small amount of cream, if needed. This sauce keeps well.

MRS. CULBERTSON ON BRIDGE

Slow, Sound Play Preferred to Erratic Brilliance

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

In case anyone who is well-grounded in the fundamentals of Bridge, but does not understand all the finer points of complex plays, feels that he is at a disadvantage when opposing the brilliant player who is surefire on squeezes but erratic in simple technique, I wish to reassure him. I would at any time rather have as a partner the former type. His errors of omission may cause him at times to overlook opportunities which would be exploited by the master of brilliancies; but in the long run he will do much better, by virtue of the points he does not lose, than will the player who subsists entirely on the points he gains.

I saw a game contract lost by a good player because of careless play. The declarer I can best describe as a Bridge romanticist; he will spend a great deal of time and effort in seeking to execute a difficult play or a clever bid, but he cannot bring himself to devote the same loving care to the nec-essa-mill hafd which comes up, in actual play, in a ratio of ten-to-one to the more spectacular end plays.

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♡ 10 9 7 5 2 ♢ K 6 4 ♣ A K J 6 2
♠ K 8 3 ♡ Q 10 5 ♢ 8 4 ♣ A 10 7 3 2	North West East South	♠ A J 4 ♡ 9 3 ♢ 10 9 5 ♣ K Q 8 6 4
	♠ Q 6 ♡ A J 8 7 2 ♢ Q 7 3 ♣ J 9 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♢ (1)	Pass (2)	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♢	Pass
2 ♡ (3)	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) Showing the biddable suit before the higher-ranking unbiddable suit, though they were of the same length.

(2) Too weak for a vulnerable overcall which requires six playing-tricks for safety, under the Culbertson Rule of Two and Three.

(3) This was an encouraging bid, since North could have passed a suit which had been assisted. South's three-heart bid accepted the try for game, and North raised as a matter of sound mathematics, which makes the value of the game overshadow the risk of being set and losing a sure part-score.

West chose the diamond eight as his opening lead, and South won it in his own hand with the Queen so that he could immediately lead one of his losing clubs and ruff it with one of dummy's small hearts. By this line of play South lost his contract. More careful reasoning would have shown him that his greatest chance of success lay in the full utilization of dummy's established diamond suit. By taking out one of dummy's hearts he relinquished his one chance of an entry to the diamonds after trumps had been drawn, unless the Heart Queen could be captured by a finesse.

Had South cashed his Ace and King of trumps and then run the diamond suit, West could have trumped in on the third round with his high trump, but the third heart would have remained in dummy to stop the club suit and coincidentally put the proper hand in the lead to continue running the diamonds. After dummy had ruffed a club, this means of playing the hand was gone. South was forced to give up, in addition to the two spades and one heart which he could not avoid, a club trick, and this was the fourth and setting trick for East and West.

As it happens, a club opening by West would have made the contract impossible by any play, but it would have been a difficult lead for West to make. North had bid two suits and assisted another, and it seemed likely that North would be so short in clubs that the Ace might be ruffed, establishing the club King for South if he held it.

The correct plan of campaign in the hand above should not have escaped any careful player; and it is the careful player who can be depended upon to win.

TO FIND LOVE

Doesn't Search You Out —Meet It Half Way

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Were you born with the silver spoon, or rather the golden one, that ensures your meeting, when you're just the right age and under the most glamorous conditions, hundreds of charming, eligible young men, scores of whom may wish to marry you?

Probably you were not.

But you are none the less entitled to a happy life, or what spells a happy life for women: Love, marriage, wifehood, motherhood.

How are you going to get these things?

Chance is likely to favor you. In a year from now, perhaps, you and the Perfect Lover may be saying to each other: "Wasn't it the most divinely strange thing that we ever met? Who would have dreamed that it could happen?" And so on.

Or perhaps in your case, because of conspicuous loveliness or charm, a desirable fate is pretty much of a certainty.

But if you're not a beauty or a siren, and still don't want the major event of your life to be left to the caprices of luck, what then? What are you going to do about it? Can a girl plan her life with assurance that the plans will work?

CERTAINTY OF LOVE

I have just been asked, in all seriousness, what occupation a girl should choose to follow in order to make love and marriage a sure-fire matter. "Under Age," as this correspondent calls herself, insists that she isn't pretty has no style, that boys don't notice her; in short, is an Ugly Duckling.

But a courageous little Ugly Duckling, and a sensible one, she knows what she wants of life, and instead of just dreaming about it, as girls are traditionally supposed to do, this youngster is willing to work for her goal. But she doesn't want to make a mistake on the way—and so she truthfully puts the whole matter up to me.

She is 17. She could stay at home, be domestic and—wait. But she is very sure that she would lose out by this method. If she were pretty enough, she says, she could learn to be a "hostess,"—in a hotel, or maybe even in an airplane. But they don't want ugly ducklings in such positions. Or she could teach young children, or get work in a department store. Doubtful, she thinks.

CAREERS

Then, there's nursing. She has heard that romance with a doctor is almost certain. Is that true, she asks me? She would be willing to work hard.

Or she could be somebody's secretary. But, of course, he would already have a wife. In short, what do I advise?

If this inexperienced child were a little older, she would, of course, know that there is certainly no line of work open to a girl that will guarantee her a husband—no royal road to romance.

If she has no social back ground, she will do well, as she clearly realizes, to get out in the world, both to educate her self and to meet men.

What it all boils down to is that a girl mustn't be content to be helpless in this or any other matter. She must try to be a Somebody in a world where there are too many Nobodies. Thus she will be equipped to meet romance half way.

Tailored Chic

SNAPPY DETAILS FOR SMART YOUNGSTER

By MARION MARTIN

Something different in tailored chic is this trim frock for the young business or college girl. From its nice tabbed collar that points the way to shoulder width, down to the perky pleats which front the skirt—it's a pretty jaunty affair. At the back the bodice is gathered to the straight yoke, to give that new "backfullness" to the blouse. And what you think are little pockets trimming the blouse front aren't pockets at all, but just cunning little tabs. Make the frock of wool-crepe or jersey in that lovely new shade of Scottie green and for a touch of contrast, slip a gay scarf under the collar and tie it at the back.

Pattern 9221 may be ordered only in sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 12 requires 2 yards 54-inch fabric and ⅞ yard 36-inch contrasting.

Flower Girl AT INFORMAL Wedding

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a newcomer in town and have had several callers. Some left cards. Others didn't. 1—Is it necessary to return these calls and how soon? Should I leave my card, or not? 2—One person has entertained me at dinner, and also called. Must I return her call before extending a reciprocal invitation?

A READER.

1—Yes, it is socially very necessary that you return these calls of welcoming into the new-comer community. This is one of the most important social gestures that people can make to us, and these polite visits should be returned at once, within two weeks, if possible.

Leave your visiting-cards when you make these return calls. Leave one of your cards for the hostess and one for any other adult woman in the household, say an older daughter or an aunt who may be a member of the household. And, if you wish to register your husband's compliments, too, leave one of his cards for the hostess, one for the host, and one for any other adult member of the household. But don't leave more than three of any one card.

2—It would be the polite and gracious thing for you to call before you extend this invitation to dinner.

Dear, Helpful Aunt Bella:

When an especially tasty dish is served at a formal dinner, A. B., is it proper to ask for a second helping? Anxious Ans.—I am afraid to do so invariably marks one as a boor who is deficient in good breeding, my dear young friend. In situations of this sort, Auntie usually tips over her plate when just about finished. That usually gets results.

LIFE, GEOGRAPHY AND ADMIRAL BYRD

Up in the vast and frigid North
The Eskimos go gaily forth
To hunt the walrus and the seal
And maybe sometimes sex appeal.

In the temperate latitudes
Are gents with ditto attitudes;
Instead of walruses and seals
They concentrate on big bold deals,
And tucked among their other aims
Are one or two or several dames.

Further south, down in the Tropics,
Men sit and talk of many topics—
While sipping tall and icy drinks
Their thoughts revert to dames, methinks,

And so on down until at last
We reach another region vast—
A land, hooray! that still is free
Of women! What a place to be!
At least these things we've often heard—
We got it from a Dickie Byrd.

St. Sincere.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

AUSTEN LAKE on Bill Bingham Talks Turkey With Lou Little

NEW YORK, DEC. 29

A LARGE MAN WITH a shiny forehead and a nose like the inverted snout of a coffee pot, and a medium man with brindle-gray hair and many thinking—wrinkles, sat in the cathedral hush of the Harvard Club

Austen Lake

Lou Little, with the alert, bright eyes of a well-bred fox terrier, was listening gratefully while Bill Bingham, charged with resurrecting Harvard football, priced him as a head football coach

Being forthright, candid types, no shadow boxing was required, Bingham saying frankly that he was, as yet, "just looking around," and in no position to close a deal.

Little replied that he felt complimented by Bill's interest, since Harvard is a foot ball holy-of-holies where all pious, right living coaches hope some day to ascend. He might be available, salary and conditions being right.

Then Bingham said, of course, Harvard would hue to its scruples, no mousing after schoolboy players and no sweetening the kitty for athletes.

He sought a forceful, virtuous and able man who could mine out the native gold in Harvard's football hills, but he didn't expect any miracles of alchemy, like making gold from base metal.

$12,000 Yearly, Long Term Contract

As to salary, Bill added, Harvard might go as high as $12,000. That would be tops, and Little said, of course, he was getting $15,000 at Columbia, with side pickings. But he might be willing to take less with a long contract.

And that, dear friends, as nearly as may be to one who was not invited to the conspiracy, is what happened at the Harvard Club in what will be the first of several meetings between Lou Little and the athletic lords of Harvard.

In the end Little may spurn the Harvard job, because Columbia might go into a panic at losing its Moses, and dish him up a 5-year contract. Or it may be stubborn about allowing him to break the present agreement, which has two more years to run.

Lou knows, too, that he is riding the crest of a personal boom just now and that the Hail Columbias of today may quickly turn to locust noises and cusses tomorrow, when and if his engine jumps the track.

He has no illusions as to the thin separting line between present heroism and future bumhood.

So this is his chance. Five years, please, Columbia, or else.

Harvard prefers Little to the pick of the entire college coaching field. But you may be certain that Bingham, the fate of whose administration is closely linked with the current coaching solution, is not putting all of his eggs in hawk-beaked Lou's basket.

Since coming to New York last Tuesday, Bill has talked to a swarm of visiting coaches, including Frank O'Shaughnessy of Chicago University, jotting down notes in his little black memorandum book that he carries with him at all times and which contains a record of H. A. A. mysteries.

I'll wager when he files his report to the athletic council next month, he will have a typewritten volume of conversations with every football notable in the scale between Huey Long and "Biff" Jones, who represent the extreme poles of football sanity.

Proselyting Foreign Word to Yost

Well, for sheer windage, and barometrical word-pressure, the tempest which blew the hair from Boston's scalp the other night, is just a summer zephyr when compared to this gathering of coaches, officials and directors.

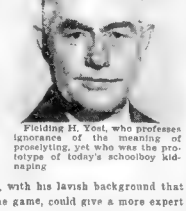
Height of irony came when "Hurry-Up" Yost, Michigan's venerable sage, rose during a discussion of proselyting and the habit of schoolboy kidnaping, to ask, please, would somebody give a definition of what this might be.

Yost professed a lofty ignorance, which is strictly a stomach-chuckle. Because in his junior day Yost was a historic example of proselyting at its best, who bounced around from West Virginia, to Lafayette and back again like a Rocky Mountain goat.

There is the fascinating story which is woven into one of the Lafayette folk tales, which tells how Yost came up with West Virginia and stayed the next week to play with Lafayette.

Only in the middle of the next week, he sadly informed his new coach that some of his friends in Morgantown, W. Va., were running him for the highly lucrative position of county sheriff and that he would have to go back and dwell on the ground to be eligible. Which he did.

Memory Short



Fielding H. Yost, who professes ignorance of the meaning of proselyting, yet who was the prototype of today's schoolboy kidnaping

I suspect that Yost himself, with his lavish background that goes back to the dark ages of the game, could give a more expert definition of proselyting than anybody here present.

One of the pictorial sights of this assembly is the wistful figure of Eddie Casey, recently emancipated as Harvard coach, scampering around the hotel halls, bobbing and ducking at acquaintances. Eddie, like his late employer Bill Bingham, is shopping.

There is a report, which I discredit, that Eddie might be given the refusal of the N. Y. U. job, since Dr. Marvin Stevens is still pouting over his one-year contract.

Pusie-Nichols Feud Lures Fans to Arena

THREE-COURSE TREAT IN STORE TONIGHT

By Bill Grimes

Even if you have to crawl on your hands and knees, don't fail to be at the Arena tonight for a triple attraction. A Cubs-Reds game, a Pusie-Nichols feud, and the introduction of the new rule eliminating the mid ice zone are billed, all for one admission.

There is nothing more tense in sports annals than the Pusie-Nichols feud. The cubs...

GEORGE NICHOLS

...tlening the great Jean Pusie unexpectedly and from behind... Pusie flew into a rage... Not because he had been crashed to the ice but because of the method resorted to.

Right then and there he predicted Nichols would rue the day he elected to make a saucer out of a Pusie. Jean's first impulse was to wait until the Cubs and Reds met again in Providence, but, on second thought, he decided that in view of the coming two-game series ... Quebec he should come forth and look to be in shape for Albert LeLacheur's batting henchmen. So he was informed the Nicholson feud will be tonight at the Arena.

Tonight, the Can-Am League fans will have an opportunity of judging the wisdom of the new rule which has eliminated the center zone... According to the players, who have been practicing the new plays, the change has speeded the game considerably and will necessitate more frequent substitutions...

There is great mystery concerning the status of Bert McInnis of the Cubs, and Burr Williams of the Bruins... Minus any fanfare or even a mention of the fact, Williams was ordered to report to the Cubs after the Maple Leaf Christmas night, and McInnis was taken to Montreal with the Bruins.

Promotional activities for the Bruins and Cubs causes operator strictly on a publicity pan at least giving the slightest consideration to news... Walter "Red" Jackson expects to be able to take his place in the Cub lineup next week... He reported to the junior Bruins suffering from an injured knee and has been receiving daily treatments from Joe Gilmore, the Cub trainer.

Within a few days, "Dede" Klein's young brother, who has been playing for Prince Albert out in Saskatchewan, will report to the Bruin Cubs... Young Klein, who is said to be bigger than his brother, is a center and also plays left wing.

Although he has received few notices, Bob Blake the Cub wonder is one of the best prospects the Bruins have picked up in years... Moreover, Blake is an American born and reared in Hibbing, Minn... And he is playing his first season of professional hockey... Blake is fast and learns quickly and is fortified with an abundance of courage... He is a natural Ivy leaguer.

Manager Walter Brown and his Olympic Club squad will leave for New York, via the outside line Monday afternoon for a New Year's Day game in Madison Square Garden... The Olympics held two practice sessions yesterday, the first at 7 o'clock in the morning and the second at 11 p. m... Ben Langmaid, Pete Sanford and Freddie McDonnell may not accompany the Olympics to New York, where Ding Palmer, the former Yale star, will join the team and return to take up his residence in Boston.

During the past month there has been a movement on foot to bring Mickie Ion back to the N. H. L... Back in the spring of 1931 Mickie was barred from organized hockey for life after the Brunin-Canadien play-off series in Montreal... Lionel Conacher is on his last legs as a big leaguer... Big Conny fashion posed pro football in Canada last fall and the punishment he absorbed has caused the boys to go back on him...

I wonder if Bill Terry would have tendered the banquet to the New York baseball scribes had his Giants captured the National League pennant... The New York Fourth Estate has Colonel John Hammond, the major domo of Madison Square Garden, on the griddle and are taking the West Pointer for such a ride that he threatened to clean out the entire office force.

It is expected that next fall both minor activities will be recognized by the administration officials.

East Stars On Shelf

San Francisco, Dec 29 (US)—They called 'em the "touchdown twins" of the East Shrine all-star grid eleven. Much hope for an eastern victory over the west, New Year's day at Kezar stadium, was placed in their ability to play this game called football.

Then Duane Purvis of Purdue was laid low with torn cartilage and tendons of the knee. His leg was operated upon and is now in a cast, and will remain there for at least eight weeks. And, today, the jinx again hit that eastern squad.

This time misfortune came in the form of an attack of tonsilitis which sent Francis ("Pug") Lund of Minnesota to the University of California infirmary and made his appearance in the contest Tuesday questionable.

In the same league Jamaica put up a score of 1510, of which Coelsch got 344, McCarthy 321 and Crowell 310. Roslindale, too, went over the charmed 1500 by 15 pins, the high men being Draheim's 329 and McDonough's 315.

There were three noteworthy scores made in the Oil League at the Huntington Club when Watson connected for 340 pins, Manro getting 338 and Stull 330 . . . Quinn led the way in the Metropolitan League at Hawley street with his second string of 130 and a total of 324. Krumins had his good night in the Faneuil Hall League by blasting 140 pins off the alley in his third string for an add-up of 314 and Wi[illegible]ett was close to the leader with 340.

Colleges Adopt New Grid Code

By Associated Press

New York, Dec. 29—The National Collegiate A. A. has taken a definite step forward in its campaign [illegible] football players.

The N. C. A. A.'s adoption of a nine-point code for the guidance of its members [illegible] was regarded by college leaders as a move in the right direction despite the fact that the code is not binding upon anyone.

They pointed out that the code for the first time definitely defines certain practices which the N. C. A. A. regards as "unfair" encouragement to athletes.

The "unjustifiable practices" as [illegible] in the code, include: [illegible] pay for work at higher wages than other students [illegible] work to be done, loaning money for remitting fees because a boy is an athlete, arranging interviews or corresponding with a prospective athlete, promising employment, loans, scholarships other than those available to any student, luring athletes into transferring from other colleges and the giving of financial aid by alumni, club or fraternity groups.

The code approved only two methods of encouraging athletes: work for the university at the same wage paid any other student and permission for athletic authorities to point out in speeches or in response to direct queries "what they believe to be the educational advantages of the institutions they represent."

Although the N. C. A. A. will make no attempt to police its membership along the lines of the code's provisions, Prof. Z. G. Clevenger of Indiana, chairman of a special committee on recruiting and subsidizing, hailed its adoption as "some advancement toward a more wholesome and more sportsmanlike condition."

BINGHAM MUM FOR 2 WEEKS

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Despite reports linking numerous prominent coaching names with the vacancy at Harvard created by the retirement of Eddie Casey as head football mentor, the Crimson's athletic authorities still have an "open mind."

Cannot say whether or not we will go outside the graduate ranks for our new head coach but I can say there is no restriction, so far as this is concerned."

SANTA MARIA HANDICAP

MAROONED ONE OF FAVORITES ON COAST

By Lou Bindman

International News Service Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 29—The last week-end racing session of the year was scheduled today.

At Tropical Park, Fla., a $1,000 feature event, the Sarasota Handicap, is carded, bringing out five horses of all ages with top weights of 117 pounds going to Slapdash. Fred Alger's Sabula totes 114. The remaining three entrants are Fair Sickle, Chastity and Earl Porter.

At Alamo Downs, Tex. 13 nominees appear on the overnight list for the featured Alamo Handicap to be run over the Russell course of six and one-half furlongs.

The consistent sprinter Carbon finds a pretty solid field pitted against him, including My Dandy, Wichita City, Biff, Bedight, Whisking Capitalist, and the Vestal-McKee entry of Indian Salute and Jim Dandy.

This, too, is an event for horses of all ages and carries a purse of $1200.

The sport at the New Orleans Fair Grounds is dominated by the sixth race, a handicap attracting nine horses, all ages, for the mile dash. B. Hernandez has nominated a speedy pair of sprinters in Fan Fern and Chief's Pride, either one capable of winning.

Counselor Crane and Cloudet shape as the strongest contenders with the lightly weighted Hit and Run a dangerous possibility, considering his most recent good performance.

The biggest purse of the afternoon is distributed at Santa Anita, the new California track near Los Angeles which attracted a crowd of 50,000 opening day.

The $2500 added Santa Maria handicap is the piece de resistance and finds a crack field of 15 on the list for the six furlongs.

Such well known stars as Marooned, Frisky Matron, Red Wagon, Sweeping Light, Wise Daughter, Ima Count, Rock X., Semaphore, Royal Blunder, and the C. V. Whitney pair of Jabot and Trumpery were among those likely to start.

SUGAR TENNIS PLAY IN N'ORLEANS

By Universal Service

New Orleans, La., Dec. 29—The festivities of the Mid-Winter Sports Association, which will come to a climax on New Year's Day when Tulane engages Temple University, began as first round matches in the Sugar Bowl tennis tournament were played.

The matches of the invitation tournament ran pretty much to form except for those of Dr. Eugene McCauliff of New York, and Wilmer Allison.

The former, seeded No. 2, suffered an upset defeat at the hands of Eddie Sutton while Allison found himself trailing when his match with Ernest Sutton was postponed because of darkness. Sutton had won the first, 9—7, and the second was tied at six all.

Meanwhile, for the main event, the football game on New Year's Day, Glenn ("Pop") Warner was putting his Temple warriors through the polishing stages, while Ted Cox was giving his Tulanians some good advice on how to stop the razzle dazzle of "Pop."

TAKES FEATURE AT ALAMO DOWNS

Alamo Downs, Tex., Dec. 29—Ladino, five-year-old gelding owned by A. C. Yzquierdo, closed well to take the leading event here by a length from W. J. Potter, Jr.'s Polvo's Pride. Harky, from F. J. Valli's stable, was third.

Polvo's Pride tired under the pace and Landino, after a poor start, made up ground in the stretch and won going away. The winner paid $15.60 to $2 and covered the six furlongs in 1 22.

Augusta, Me., Dec. 29 (AP)—Those who feel that the pastime of "playing the horses" should be made legal in Maine put their ammunition today in a legislative bill to authorize pari mutuel betting.

It will be filed at the new [illegible] Legislature convening January 2 and the chances that [illegible]

A similar bill to permit pari mutuel betting at Maine's [illegible] racing tracks was shot at the [illegible] Legislature by the late State Senator Frank Pole of Westbrook reported out of committee favorably, the measure succumbed to lack of votes in the House.

The author of the new attempt to legalize betting has not been announced but L. Smith Dunnack, revisor of statutes, said such a measure would be introduced.

New arguments in its favor were ready to hand the more important of which dealt with [illegible]

N. H. PROFITED

The bill's [illegible] to New Hampshire's experiment of putting money on the hoof" which netted that state $[illegible] in profit after a 78-day racing season ending November 1.

Further, the Maine Fair Association placed itself on record as endorsing pari mutuel betting.

"Fence bets" generally have been followed by those attending the Maine tracks, and turf followers said wagering had been light in recent years.

Racing attendance held up well, however, last season, since some of New England's best nags were introduced to Maine half-mile tracks. Those on the "inside" saw a prospect, providing the new bill should receive a [illegible], of a number of fast fairground tracks in the state grouping into a summer pari mutuel circuit designed to attract sportsmen now drawn to other states.

LOSSES N. U. QUINTET WEAKENED

The Northeastern Husky basketball quintet may lose two crack forwards because of the academic plan by which students attend classes five weeks, and work for five weeks.

Johnny Barone of New Haven, Ct. and George Harris of Attleboro are both in division A, the class which goes into the working period next week.

Because of the lack of jobs available both Barone and Harris have signified intentions of spending the five-week period at home.

Such a move on the part of the two athletes would deprive Coach Al McCoy of two good wingmen and hurt N. U.'s chances of playing through a championship season.

The forward posts are covered by Capt. Heath Morse and Hy Burstein. Morse is the lone vet forward the Huskies have. Burstein, formerly a guard, has been converted into a wing. Barone and Harris are the second five's forwards.

Mr. Boston 5-YEAR PLAN To Bring Celt $1,000,000

By Jack Conway——

WE ARE on the way out of the depression. At least Jack McGrath of Worcester thinks so. His guarantee of $100,000 to Dan O'Mahoney, Ireland wonder athlete, to wrestle under his direction for five years proves this fact.

McGrath believes O'Mahoney's purses during the next five years will reach $1,000,000. As Dan has [illegible] he will receive more than $100,000 if he should [illegible] he will.

When O'Mahoney signed, he made one stipulation. It was that he should return to Ireland immediately after the American [illegible] Dusek at a Christmas Eve card show at the Garden or next Friday night. Dan has promised to appear for the Irish Free State Relief Fund at Dublin the latter part of January.

Wrestling is drawing better than in all parts of [illegible] to Au[illegible] It is believed that Mahoney will start a world's title following his meeting here with Dusek.

It was at first believed that McGrath would try to pull O'Mahoney out of his match with Dusek on the ground the Nebraska Wildcat is too green and unorthodox in his style for the Irish champion. He did not attempt to do so.

Mr. Boston

DAN'S RECORD

McGRATH has faith in O'Mahoney's ability to wreck all opposition.

"Dan showed a world of class against Strangler Lewis," said McGrath. "He made Lewis quit in his dressing room. The strangler refused to come out for the fourth round of the contest. In England, they wrestle by rounds. Each round lasts for five minutes.

"O'Mahoney was too fast and rough for the Strangler. Before meeting Lewis, the Irish champion won 17 matches inside of 17 minutes. He is a human cyclone in the ring. I don't care how rough Dusek is next Friday night. Dan will take care of him"

O'Mahoney has been working at a local gym under the direction of Freddy Moran. The latter says Dan is one of the finest athletes he has ever seen in action. He believes the Irish champion will prove a greater mat sensation than Sonnenberg.

Following his training Dan dropped over to Cambridge for a meeting with Chief of Police Timothy Leahy. The latter was a famous football player at Rindge years ago, and was much impressed by O'Mahoney's splendid physique.

DUSEK DUE

ERNIE DUSEK will arrive here Monday. He has been tipped that he is in for a hard battle and he wants to be in the best possible condition. He will be accompanied by his brother, Rudy. The latter will also wrestle on the Christmas Fund card.

Dusek's greatest matches here were against Ed Don George. He is the only challenger, other than Jim London, who has been able to extend the little holder. Dusek is tireless and very aggressive. He has a style that is all his own and will not let up on O'Mahoney a second while they are in the ring.

There will be popular prices of 55 cents, $1.10, $1.65 and $2.20 for this great show. Tommy Parle reports a heavy demand for reservations at Paul Bowser's office at No. 115 Chauncy street, while Tommy Waters says the demand for tickets at the Garden has been brisk.

RANDOM SHOTS

RIP VALENTI, the silent man of the boxing game, lost ten pounds while promoting the Dempsey-Sharkey-Baer battle extravaganza. Rip is getting ready to announce another show which will feature the Baer brothers, Max and Buddy . . . In making 178 pounds for Sammy Slaughter, Lou Brouillard proved he can get down to the middleweight notch of 160 pounds with ease. Johnny Buckley would like to match Brouillard with Ted "Tarzan" Lewis for a championship go. In view of Brouillard's knockout of Slaughter, a Brouillard-Yarosz bout in Pittsburgh would be a first class attraction . . . The New Year's Eve party at the Norfolk Country Club will be a banner affair. All the Eskimo golfers will attend . . . "Rabbit" Maranville tells me Dizzy Dean isn't the least bit conceited despite his numerous wisecracks. Dizzy merely has color and knows how to keep his name in the newspapers. Frank Hogan tipped me he has taken off a great deal of weight by a proper diet.

Bingham Warns Coaches

"SEMIPRO" ANGLE MENACES GAME, MENTORS HEAR

New York [illegible] kinds of advice buzzing in their ears, the college football coaches wended their weary ways homeward today. Beware of recruiting and semi-professionalism, beware of drinking among spectators, beware of gambling on games and a number of other bewares were hurled [illegible] ... speakers of the annual coaches meeting.

[illegible] Bingham, Harvard sports director, [illegible] ... during the two-day conclave. Among other things, Bingham said that coaches must guard against teams of recruited school stars, supported, and on scholarships.

Football rules for 1935 will differ in no radical way from the code in vogue during the 1934 season, according to the report of Walter R. Okeson, chairman of the National Football rules committee.

A committee of the Coaches Association recommended that colleges refuse admittance to games of persons under the influence of intoxicants.

Drinking among spectators and betting were named as two growing evils by Gus Dorais, coach at Detroit.

The report frowned upon the practice of coaches picking writers in newspapers and recommended that the practice of [illegible] misleading statements be discontinued.

Stanford Eleven Shows Early-Season Form

By Universal Service

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 29.—Fight of fire and obviously ready to go to town a-whooping, as Jimmy Hines, the warpath should be Coach Tiny Thornhill's tribe of Stanford Redskins ran through two workouts at Tournament park with a vigor that bodes ill for Alabama come New Year's Day.

Attaches of the Stanford camp were amazed at the sudden rejuvenation of their charges, who have been more or less in the dumps ever since the moment when Bobby Grayson was injured early in the California game.

That blow, coming at a time when Monk Moscrip wasn't even in uniform sank the hearts and sapped the energy of the Indian squad.

Perhaps it was the return of Claude Callaway, 204-pound right tackle, that inspired the boys to new life. Certainly, had he not returned for the game, his absence would have hurt the Stanford chances beyond measure.

Bobby Grayson looked okay and his legs, wind and stamina appeared to have strengthened. With Bobby calling the signals the team ran through its plays beautifully. No scrimmage was held at either workout.

TAXPAYER BEGS GOVERNMENT FOR JUSTICE

By B. C. FORBES

[illegible]

Not only so, but perhaps you know that various arms of the government have been lending quite a little bit of our (taxpayers') money—a few billions and more—at 4 per cent and maybe less, and that your boss, Uncle Sam, has offered millions of dollars (to municipalities, for example) free, gratis, for nothing, if only they will borrow at 4 per cent.

Maybe the government's enthusiasm for charging borrowers only low interest rates has been influenced by the extraordinarily easy terms on which it has been able to borrow billion after billion; long-term bonds have been bought by banks, in bales, at an average of three per cent or less, while for short periods the Federal Treasury has been swamped with offers of funds at—believe it or not—one half of one per cent, nay, one-quarter of one per cent per annum, and happily the supply at such interest rates seems, thus far, to be without limit.

But, lo and behold, long after the picnic was over, an income tax clerk decided that he could have traveled across the continent and elsewhere more economically than I had traveled and ... arbitrarily disallowed part of the expenses I incurred in earning my income.

There was nothing for me to do but to protest—and submit. I made a deal to pay this excess assessment according to ... upon arrangement. The interest rate was to be 6 per cent.

I have lived up to the letter of that agreement. I have paid every dollar of the tax plus every dollar of the stipulated 6 per cent interest.

[illegible]

... ers must be 12 per cent!

"Does the government pay 12 per cent on excess taxes it unjustly collects and later has to return?" I asked.

[illegible]

Respectfully ...

Prices Higher at Close on Curb

By Associated Press

New York, Dec. 29—Prices on the Curb Exchange were generally higher today in quiet trading. A number of specialties were bid up 1 to 2 points and a better tone developed in utilities, oils and metals, following the improvement in these groups late Friday.

With few exceptions all of the active utilities were bought in fairly substantial volume and where brokers reported there was still considerable short selling and ... in these issues advances were made by American Gas, Niagara Hudson, Electric Bond & Share and American Super Power.

In ... sections of the list a steady tone prevailed in alcohols ... and among industrials with advances made by Swift International, Hiram Walker Distillers ... and American Cyanamid "B".

Parker Rust Proof and Aluminum Company led the specialties ... with gains of around ... each. Others selling ... higher included Pratt & Lambert, Novadel Agene ... Sherwin Williams ... after extending ... of the previous day ... part of the advance.

INFLATIONARY POLICIES ARE DISCUSSED

By CLARENCE W. FACKLER
Ph. D., Assistant Professor of Economics, New York University.

It is inevitable that the congressional machine will slow down to pick up the taxpayers, who stand ...

[illegible]

Congress spends within its purse and its line of credit, and confines its outlay to socially-needed goods.

[illegible]

Philosophers from the beginning of civilization have cautioned people at all times to consider carefully what precede and what follow particular developments, and then to govern themselves accordingly.

Surely, since 1929 every one must have learned the simplest and yet the most fundamental of economic principles. To long continue spending in excess of current or prospective income is the essence of inflation and the courtier of disaster. While, to saddle this excess or debt on to the shoulders of others is the very substance of deflation and the housekeeper of a national almshouse.

Of the approximate eight billion dollars increase in the public debt since January, 1934, slightly in excess of four billion dollars were borrowed in 1934, and about the same amount is yet to be borrowed in 1935. But, out of ... [illegible]

If to this two billion dollars is added $2,700,000,000, which has been realized from the devaluation of gold and from silver seigniorage, and $500,000,000 which will likely be the excess revenue over ordinary expenditures for the next fiscal year, the sum, or about $5,000,000,000, can be made available for 1935-1936 expenditures. The 74th Congress may spend much in excess of this $5,000,000,000, and so may be compelled to borrow greatly in excess of $4,000,000,000. If so, inflation will materialize, because as the debt rises the hope will dwindle for a satisfactory payment thereof.

Cato once asserted that wise men profit more by fools than fools by wise men. Wise men, he said, avoid the faults of fools, but fools will not imitate the good examples of wise men. It is hoped that the United States will not follow in the footsteps of ... [illegible]

No one wishes his life's savings to become a mere pittance. Neither do those people without savings wish to exchange a billion dollars for a slice of bread. It is, therefore, not a prophecy but sound advise that, like hitch-hikers, every person must keep his eyes glued on the congressional road map. Each must be prepared to reinvest his savings in staple goods, in proprietary equities and in real estate the moment that the congressional car detours to inflation.

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

J. S. Bache & Co.—Impressions as to what the contents of the President's message to Congress will be will doubtless influence the course of prices for a spell. Obviously, the likely character of early legislation will furnish an additional guide to the market's performance.

Shields & Co.—Prospects for further improvement in general trade next year should gradually influence upward trend in securities when current nervousness over legislative uncertainties is relieved.

Hospitthal & Co.—The whole picture was quite bullish, possibly a little too bullish in view of possible political developments over the next few weeks, but it is likely that the lifting of seasonal pressure and reinvestment demand will result in a firm market in the immediate future.

Soucy, Swartswelter & Co.—For quick turn trading purposes we would rather regard the market as now entering a technical selling zone.

Curb improved; specialties in demand.

Cotton quiet; local and trade buying; ... cables.

Sugar higher; Cuban buying.

Coffee quiet; steady Brazilian markets.

Cotton Higher at Close of Trading

New York, Dec. 29 (INS)—Cotton futures continued their upward progress today, although gains were limited to a few points by the comparatively quiet trading in the ring with the run of contracts moving to the high points established at the start of the week.

Near the close futures were 2 to 3 points higher, with March up 2 at 12.70, May up 3 at 12.77, July up 2 at 12.80 and October up 3 at 12.63.

Quiet Closing in Wool Top Futures

BRITISH BONDS ARE FIRM

By WYLIE KING
(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

London, Dec. 29—Indicating expectations of accentuated cheapness of money in January, applications totaled 66,000,000 pounds for the 35,000,000 pounds of Treasuries alloted today at 0.325 per cent as against last week's 0.51 per cent.

British government bonds were firm, anticipating a 200,000,000-pound conversion within a fortnight.

British rails were ⅛ to ½ up, the 15,000-pound decrease in traffics being considered satisfactory because the 1933 figures included Christmas Eve.

Bear repurchases of belgas again strengthened gold currencies against sterling, but it was noteworthy that fresh bears opened forward belgas.

Raw Hide Futures Close Irregular

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Raw hide futures closed irregular, 6 higher to 2 lower.

March 9.60b, June 9.98 Sept 10.30b; Dec 10.65.

SHARES HIGHER AT CLOSE OF TRADING

New York, Dec. 29—The stock market continued its recovery today at a slower pace. Gains during the short session ran to about a point, in contrast to yesterday's session, when some advances exceeded 4 points.

Considerable profit-taking also made its appearance following the opening burst of strength.

MOTORS RISE

Motor shares received considerable attention in today's session, with Chrysler and General Motors setting the pale by rising fractionally to their best levels in more than a month.

U. S. Steel, Bethlehem andother steelshares were buoyant, reaching new highs on the current movement. American Can continued the outstanding favorite, rising nearly a point to a new high for the year.

Consistent demand was apparent in the railroad shares, where Atchison, Union Pacific, New York Central and several of the recently heavily sold lower priced stocks scored gains exceeding 2 points. The less than seasonal decline in loadings reported after the close yesterday was a factor in attracting buying in the carrier shares.

TRADE IMPROVEMENT

The focus of interest in financial quarters moved toward the new session of Congress opening next week. Interest was stimulated by Washington reports the administration was preparing to present a program of banking legislation designed to broaden the powers of the Federal Reserve system.

Year-end signs of business improvement encouraged trade prophets to take a brighter view of 1935 prospects.

Further gains in mill operations were reported scheduled in some steel centers, particularly those which are furnishing the bulk of the raw materials for the motor industry. Shipments of new Plymouth models for the week ended December 22 were announced to have been the largest for a similar period in the company's history. Other makers also were reported unusually busy.

Federal Reserve figures indicated department store sales in the New York metropolitan area in the final 10 days of the Christmas shopping did not match those in other sections of the country. Trade was described as barely equal to that of a year ago in this area. A city sales tax for emergency relief was imposed during the period.

Although prices of hogs, corn and other farm staples have increased materially lately, the wholesale commodity index of the bureau of labor statistics for the week ended December 22 was unchanged at 76.7.

RUST-PROOF TO PAY IN STOCK

Parker Rust-Proof declared a dividend of one share of preferred stock of Parker-Wolverine Company on each share of Parker Rust-Proof common stock, payable on or about Jan. 15, 1935, to stock of record Jan. 2.

The stock being distributed was accepted in payment of an obligation due Parker-Rust from Parker-Wolverine, the number of shares received being the same as the number of Parker Rust-Proof common shares outstanding, 118,049. The Wolverine shares represent 5 per cent preferred stock with par value of $1.50.

Parker Rust-Proof Company also declared the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents, payable Feb. 20 to stock of record Feb. 10.

Nat. Distillers to Resume Dividends

At regular monthly meeting of directors of National Distillers Products Corp. a dividend of 50 cents a share was declared, payable February 1 to stock of record January 15. This is the first cash dividend since 50 cents quarterly was paid Aug. 1, 1932.

The president stated that payment of future quarterly dividends will determine in the light of earnings and business conditions prevailing at such times.

Am. Light to Pay Common Dividend

American Light & Traction Co. declared a dividend of 30 cents on the common, payable February 1 to stock of record January 15. A similar payment was declared three months ago.

Western Electric Sales to Be Higher

Sales of the Western Electric Co. for 1934 will be about $90,000,000 compared with $89,500,000 in 1933. Some further improvement is anticipated in 1935.

Ely & Walker

Ely & Walker Dry Goods Company declared an extra dividend of 50 cents on the common, payable January 15 to stock of record January 4 and regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents, payable March 1 to stock of record February 18.

Continental Can

Continental Can Company, Inc., has just completed a special Christmas distribution to each of its more than 11,000 employes, the total amount of which will exceed $200,000.

Nashua Mfg. Income

For the year ended Nov. 2, 1934, Nashua Manufacturing Co., big blanket producer, reports a deficit of $150,026, after loss of $70,591 on sale of capital assets and credit of $22,868 in form of discount on 490 shares of preferred stock retired.

This compares with a profit in the 1933 year of $368,217, equal to $6.59 per share on 40,718 shares of preferred stock outstanding. In each of the three preceding years the company had shown substantial losses.

On November 2 last current assets totaled $6,571,475 and current liabilities $3,404,561, making net working capital $3,166,914, which was an increase of $235,135 over the total of $2,931,779 at the end of the previous year.

GRANT On Local Air AGAIN

SPIRITED HUB COMMENTATOR

By THE EARCUPPER

Some sizzling verbal socks would appear to be in the immediate offing, due for dealing out no later than this very night (WBZ) as of 6:45 p. m. At that point, between 6 and 7, loudspeaker patrons can catch an ear or two full of the fiery Dick Grant voice. Richard is ready and waiting. What he will have to say concerning certain last minute political pushing around will undoubtedly be the proverbial plenty.

Dick Grant

It's the first time Grant has held forth since his participation in the recent gubernatorial campaign. Upon the swing into the governorship by James M. Curley, the dynamic "mike" spokesman promptly assumed rights hand-man duties as secretary to the governor elect. Tonight's turn on the air probably will not find him acting in that capacity, since after all it is a private position, until inauguration of the new Commonwealth chief executive takes place two days hence. However, methinks he will have most of Massachusetts literally by the ears this evening.

ROMBERG REFLECTIONS

Sigmund Romberg, maestro and composer, gives over his 8 to 8:30 setting to the New Year theme this evening (WEEI) and features such tunes as "Auld Lang Syne" and "Old Folks at Home" with Helen Marshal, Byron Warner and the choral groups providing the vocal embellishment.

* * *

That big Buffalo band, directed by Edward D'Anna, as heard from coast-to-coast every Saturday night (WAAB) on the stroke of 10 o'clock, is to include eight stirring marches tonight, among them being Goldman's "Stepping Along" and the famous "Stars and Stripes Forever," by John Philip Sousa.

STUDIO SIDELIGHTS

Roxy and his well known broadcasting "gang" plan to present a radio impression within a radio impression (WNAC) at 8 this evening, when the veteran program planner puts his charges through "regular rehearsal" paces. All of which is designed to afford listeners a first hand idea of how major network presentations are made ready for the "mike" to absorb. While this sort of thing has been done before, many times in fact, the resourceful Roxy promises a few unique novelties 'ere the effort ends.

Three favorite songs, ranging from the popular to the classic and traditional, have been chosen by Grete Stueckgold, Metropolitan Opera soprano, who stars (WNAC) in the 9 to 9:30 place this evening. These selections are: "One Night of Love," "Voices of Spring" and Bishop's beloved "Home, Sweet Home" refrain. Andre Kostelanetz supervises the orchestra accompaniment.

Best Bets Tonight

6:00 P. M.—WAAB—"Something Old, Something New," with dancing instruction by Arthur Murray; songs by Earl Oxford, and dance orchestra.

7:45 P. M.—WNAC—Boston Sunday Advertiser presents a dramatization.

Tune Slowly for Europe

This Ear---That Air Angle on Radio Amateur Talent

By N. F. T.

Latest of the program planner proclivities is the good old reliable "Amateur Night" idea. Radioland, until a short while back, rather discouraged people coming to try-out, which fact is set forth here despite the certainty that studio bosses will insist they have always welcomed the inexperienced who had ambitions to get a "break" behind the microphone.

N. F. T.

It's surprising how many people laugh off the amateur night proposition as just so much hokum. It's true that perhaps one in 500 beginners ever manage to make the grade or actually amount to anything professionally. By the same token, there's a trait in human nature that causes hopefuls to willingly lineup and take a chance on proving to be that one survivor over 499 failures. It requires a stout set of insides to enter into a competitive exhibition realizing the odds against success. However, as stated, such courage really prevails by the ton. Of course, there are also those who never stop to consider the slim likelihood of winning. Thousands believe down deep in their hearts that they will come out on top with flying colors and a unanimous vote of approval.

In short, confidence of the kind is what enables the amateur night contest plan to prove so universally appealing. It often encourages people, where perhaps a bit of kindly discouraging would be more in order. Yet since listeners like to hear loudspeaker diversion provided by amateurs, which is quite evident, the trend will naturally develop to greater proportions. Already the networks are shaping coast to coast amateur affairs. First among these begins tomorrow night. Every major city in the nation now has a radio setting of the kind. Seasoned professionals are admittedly beginning to feel the pressure, with practically every night in the week an amateur night somewhere. Looks as though 1935 might be your year, amateurs!

FLEETING FLASHES

Cab Calloway and his hotcha tune troupe return to radio rhythm duty on January 6 . . . More good news, Ruth Etting enters the ether for a border to border song series, as of January 24 . . . Ben Bernie brings Al Jolson along as his guest artist next Tuesday night . . . Late of folke hereabouts will be disappointed to learn that no description of the big Rose Bowl game between Leland-Stanford and Alabama is coming through a Boston station from California on New Year's Day. Facilities of WEEI would be the logical outlet, but commercial committments have caused the management there to pass up the pigskin play . . . Lots of fun is poked at "mike" people now and then for mistakes and slips of the tongue. Most of them take the ribbing good naturedly. Al Pierotti, the WMEX sports slant spokesman, is one who enjoys a laugh at his own expense. Here's one about his recent interview with ring roughie Maxie Rosenbloom. At the conclusion, both were excitedly thanking one another, Pierotti was speaking the last lines and saying: "You're an ace all right. It's been extremely enjoyable believe me, and I certainly want to thank you very Max indeed Muchie." Hi there, Al!

BIRDMEN Clash in AIR TEST

83 JUNIORS RACE TODAY

Burdened with kits and boxes, containing model planes, spare parts and tools for quick repair, 83 Junior Birdmen trekked to South Armory, 18 Irvington street, this morning to compete in the organization's first indoor flying tournament to decide the championship of the Boston wing.

Official flights began under the direction of timers and judges at 9:30 o'clock.

The all-day tournament closes at 6 p. m. The wing champion will be the boy or girl whose planes score the greatest total time in the air in the three events. He will receive a beautiful silver trophy and a free trip to Detroit during Easter vacation week to compete in the national derby for the William Randolph Hearst trophy and other prizes.

There will be 17 other winners in the South Armory competition. Gold, silver and bronze medals and certificates of proficiency will be awarded to winners of from first to fifth place in each event and in both Group "A" and Group "B".

Group "A" is composed of Junior Birdmen between 16 and 21 and Group "B" are boys and girls of from 10 to 15 years old.

ABOUT FACES by ART. MOGER

The "eyes" have "it"!

You "About Faces" followers should have one grand time identifying the leading Hollywood stars as they appear in today's Boston Evening American. Why? Just because we know you'll have many hours of real enjoyment viewing "Kid Millions" and "Peck's Bad Boy" as they are shown at the Lynn Paramount Theater today.

At this palace of entertainment you North shore fans will find the proper clues to today's "About Faces" identifications. Beneath each drawing you will find a block of squares. These squares equal the number of letters in the names of the Hollywood performers that are drawn. Use the letter "O" as a guide and your answers should be forthcoming. Mail your ENTIRE week's solutions to: The About Faces Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass. If you are successful in your identifications you will share in the weekly $25 in cash awards as offered by the Boston Evening American.

Here are the lucky winners of cash awards in last week's "About Faces" series by Art. Moger:

First prize, $5 to Miss Annette Gould, 1 Kerwin street, Dorchester.

Second prize, $3, Laurence Pearson, 15 Harold street, Sharon.

Third prize, $2, Mary Neary, 43 Easterbrook road, Quincy.

Here are the winners of a brand new one dollar bill each:

Frederick W. Schultz, 2 Coggeshall avenue, Newport, R. I.

Seymour Bohn, 29 Dewey street, Roxbury.

M. Weinswig, 281 Summer street, Lynn.

Elaine L. Parsons, 5 Frederick terrace, Dorchester.

Mary M. Waldron, 30 Essex street, Cambridge.

Lillian Batchelder, 32 Milton street, Somerville.

Marcella Baller, 132 Crescent street, Waltham.

Francis Crowe, 16 Keene street, Lowell.

Lillian Kilberg, 9 Goddard street, Providence, R. I.

Mrs. Clifford White, East Rochester, N. H., Box 55.

S. Siegel, 2025 Commonwealth avenue, Brighton.

Maude Hall, 34 Mt. Vernon street, Malden.

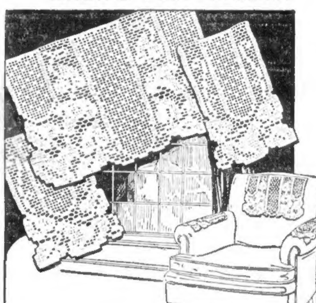
Kamylle di Giorgio, 116 Everett street, East Boston.

Armando Reale, 184 Thorndike street, Cambridge.

Mrs. E. T. Stewart, 122 Concord street, Boston.

That's all the winners for today. More next week. Let's hear from YOU!

Choice Filet Crochet



FILET CROCHET CHAIR BACK SET

PATTERN 900

Here is a filet crochet design that will make a choice chair set as well as scarf ends. In it, the morning glory motif is set off by the lace stitch and at the same time contrasts with panels of a dotted mesh. This gives the whole set a daintiness and makes it decidedly different from the usual filet crochet. The set is to be done in string, which makes it handsome as well as durable. With crochet as much in vogue in the household as in dress accessories, this filet crochet adds smartness to your living room.

Pattern 900 comes to you with detailed directions and charts for making the set shown and for using the design for scarf ends; illustrations of the set and of all stitches needed; material requirements.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) for this pattern to the Boston Evening American, Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

—O— The Communist Program of Class Warfare and World Revolution —O—

"THE dictatorship of the proletariat is nothing else than power based upon force and limited by nothing—by no kind of law and by absolutely no rule."
—LENIN, Complete Works, Vol. xviii, Page 361.

"THE American Communist Party must be improved and Bolshevised. For that end we must work in order to forge real revolutionary cadres and a real revolutionary leadership of the proletariat, capable of leading the many millions of the American working class toward the revolutionary class struggles."
STALIN, in address May 6, 1929.

"THE conquest of power by the proletariat is the VIOLENT ABOLITION of the power of the bourgeoisie, the DESTRUCTION of the MACHINERY of the capitalist state.

"We proclaim openly that our design can only be realized by the VIOLENT OVERTHROW of the ENTIRE TRADITIONAL social order."

[The above policies were formally adopted and promulgated as the Communist program by the Sixth Congress of the Kommintern of the Communists' Internationale, which was held in 1925 in Moscow.]

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1934

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

What Were the OTHER TRADES, Mr. Coakley?

A DEFENDER of the Governor's Council steps into the limelight.

He is Mr. Daniel H. Coakley of Boston.

Mr. Coakley is a member of the council.

In a radio talk last night he admitted what everybody knew, that the council had engaged in a series of trades with Governor Ely at last Thursday's meeting.

The most publicized trade brought the resignation of Eugene Hultman as police commissioner and his appointment as chairman of the Metropolitan District Commission.

It also resulted in the naming of Joseph J. Leonard, until Thursday chairman of the Boston Finance Commission, to the Boston police commissionership.

Governor-elect Curley has announced his intention of ousting both of these men.

But the trade between Governor Ely and the council saved them, at least for the time.

THE voters who elected James M. Curley would like to know, Mr. Coakley, what OTHER TRADES were made at last Thursday's meeting.

Also if OTHER TRADES are to be made at the next and last meeting of the present council.

IS THERE TO BE ANY TRADE WHEREBY $363,000 WILL BE PAID TO THE BOSTON, WORCESTER AND NEW YORK STREET RAILWAY COMPANY?

Governor Ely favors the payment. Governor-elect Curley brands it as a "raid on the state treasury."

Mr. Curley says the council at Thursday's meeting was evenly divided on the proposal to make the payment.

Is there any trade in the making which will cause a change in the council's vote?

On the Official Frontier

Real Indians on Trail

The American Indian—may his tribes continue to increase!—is going after the scalp of bureaucracy.

Such at least is the purport of an indignant memorial from the American Indian Federation to Congress and the President, protesting that constitutional rights, including free speech and free assemblage, are being denied the Indian.

Investigation will have to show how much, if any, of the long bill of grievances is true; but if any substantial part of it be well founded the patience of the Indian Federation is both surprising and commendable.

Because of lesser wrongs than those now alleged old Tecumseh, Sitting Bull and old Geronimo went on the warpath literally; and not even Custer, with his dashing Seventh Cavalry, ever dared to prevent a powwow of the Sioux or the Pawnees.

Business men who have been rebellious against bureaucracy's oppressive burdens, without much success, should welcome these unexpected allies.

For not even a bomb-proofed bureaucrat can be exactly comfortable when he knows that he has real Indians on his trail.

Help the Autoists

Better Roads One Way

One effective way of cutting down the auto accident toll of deaths and injuries would be to give our automobilists better roads.

Many miles of our highways are now in a neglected condition, while plans for building new traffic lanes go forward.

A real record of worthwhile achievement could be set by making the roads we now have better. And by keeping them in proper condition at all times.

The automobilists pay a tremendous sum in taxation, direct and indirect. Most of us are automobilists, whether we drive our own cars or ride with others.

Drivers are often blamed for accidents caused by faulty highways. Let money in the future be spent sensibly.

There's no real excuse for "soft shoulders," bumps and death-trap ruts and holes on our motor ways.

Telling the Weather

"Tech" Invention Helps

A lot of good things have come out of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The latest helps in weather forecasting and is of much promise.

It is a little Zeppelin that rides on an airplane wing. Scientists say it takes most of the guessing out of forecasting flying weather.

It records humidity, among other things. But to do so to best advantage it employs strands of human hair.

Despite all the progress made by science, nothing has been found more sensitive than human hair for absorbing moisture.

This may prove most important of all the many M. I. T. contributions to flying.

Congratulations to the Technology scientists, contributing to American advancement through peaceful conquest of the air.

Daily Bible Text "The Lord is far from the wicked, but he heareth the prayers of the righteous." —Proverbs xv, 29.

By Dean Philemon F. Sturges, Cathedral Church of St. Paul.

THE ANSWER IS "NO!"

Time was the bankrupt noble came Across the stormy water
With nothing but a tarnished name
To woo the rich man's daughter,
To lay his debts upon the block
And get his title out of hock.

The earls and dukes are out of style,
But now the League of Nations
Comes wooing with a lovelorn smile
And honeyed protestations,
But let us hope the lady fair
Will give her noble swain the air.

Hendrik Van Loon
WRITES ABOUT
Needs of Mankind

I am writing this on Christmas Day. The church bells are ringing, and for a few hours we have forgotten the ballyhoo of salesmanship, and that dividends on earth must precede treasures we hope to lay up in heaven and we say a silent prayer that this world may become a decent place of abode for men and women of good will.

I have not anything special to do. I am allowed to sit up for ten minutes at a time. I realize that a great many sermons shall have been delivered ere the Demon Nurse comes in to warn me that "Time is up." Why shouldn't I follow the good example and do a little preaching on my own?

Hendrik Van Loon

HOME FOR WOMAN

I am beginning to feel old. Not physically, for the warning the good Lord sent me as a Christmas present has really done me infinitely more good than harm, and it may have added twenty years to my potential three score and ten.

But I am told that I am completely behind the times, and that my ideas are as old-fashioned as those of my grandmother, who, together with all other good Dutch housewives, was convinced that no lady should leave her own house oftener than once a week.

And of all my old-fashioned ideas, none is more thoroughly ridiculous than the notion that man is not completely an economic animal.

I have seen hunger. And to be entirely honest, I have (in a very mild way) experienced that uncomfortable feeling that is usually caused by a lack of the necessary money with which to buy a couple of wieners.

IN NORMAL WORLD

But I also know the world is not always in the throes of such a far-reaching economic revolution as is taking place at present.

In the simplest terms, what I mean is this: That man is not only an economic animal but also an imaginative creature. And while it is true that he cannot possibly live without bread, it is equally true that he cannot possibly hope to survive without his fairy story.

These fairy stories have assumed all sorts of forms and shapes since the first of our ancestors broke through the shell that separated his conscious from his unconscious self and so set man infinitely apart from the rest of the animal kingdom.

These fairy stories have allowed men and women to ascend to the loftiest heights of altruism, and occasionally they have degraded them to a state of selfishness of which a hyena would have felt thoroughly ashamed.

And history is not merely a record of man in search of his proverbial three meals a day, but also of man trying to realize his innermost dreams and aspirations.

Quite often the economic life and the fairy story life have overlapped.

But those of us who are not hopelessly biased by some economic or religious prejudice know that there is a duality of motives in every individual.

The Moscow papers will hardly care to copy this. But if they want to do so they can go ahead, and I will even draw them an extra set of pictures especially suited to the needs of the greatest fairy story race of all ages, the Russians.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

Synthetic "Popularity"

Today, life, for a girl, appears to be just one long "popularity contest."

She would rather be "popular" than President. She would almost rather be popular than married. She would rather be rushed by the stag-line than be elected to the Hall of Fame.

She would rather be on twenty telephone lists than in Who's Who or the Almanac de Gotha.

Helen Rowland

The class or the quality of the men who hang around her doesn't matter half as so much as their quantity. Their looks, personality or intelligence is not of half so much importance as their numbers. What every girl wants is a CROWD!

POPULARITY GOAL

To have all her dances "cut in" on, all her evenings dated up and her telephone ringing all day seems to be the roseate dream and the ultimate ambition of a girl's heart and soul—the aim of her existence!

It doesn't much matter to her whether the stag-lines she collects are attracted by her charms or by her father's well-stocked cellar, whether any of them take her seriously or merely take her for granted. Just so that they come and make a "good showing." Just so that she APPEARS "popular!"

Of course, girls have always wanted to be popular. The contest for masculine admiration and attention probably began when the second cave woman appeared on earth and began pulling the first cavewoman's hair.

The heartaches and tears and rivalries behind every glittering debutante party and every holiday dance are among the tragedies which never get into the newspapers. They are beautifully camouflaged by gallant smiles.

ALWAYS IN DEMAND

But never within memory has the bid for popularity been so barefaced, so eager, so desperate as it is today! Never before have men, just as "men," been so rushed, so pampered, so flattered by the female of the species. Never have girls been so breathlessly anxious!

Eligible men and attractive men have always been in demand. Men as "husbands" and men as lovers have always been objects of rivalry among women. Even as escorts and dinner guests and dancing partners, desirable men have always had their place in the sun.

But men just as DUMMIES and decorations, like the hired gilt chairs and the potted palms from the florist's, men in squads and battalions to serve as a "background" are just a part of the new craze for "popularity."

Just what kick a girl gets out of this artificial popularity, it is hard to see. She knows—and every other girl knows—that it is all stage scenery and that it is no tribute to her charms and no proof of her personal attractiveness.

But what she doesn't know is that it is the surest route to spinsterhood.

The one-man girl, who CONCENTRATES, always walks off with the prize catch of the season, while the popularity-mad girl is wasting her time on "duds."

All this synthetic popularity is about as impressive as a set of "costume jewelry" from the five-and-ten—and not half so convincing!

The craze was started by the Desperate Debutantes and the Man-Hunting Matrons of the social stratosphere—but, alas, it seems to have permeated all walks of life, from the campus to the basement bargain-counter!

Human Side of the News

Court for Terrorists

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Lightly touched in the news, but startling in its bearing on the sovereignty of modern states, is the move of France to establish in the League of Nations a special court for terrorists. Those recent Marseille killings have brought into the light sinister and deadly bands, schooled and sworn to assassination, nurturing centuries-old hatreds.

The racial and political hodgepodge of Central and Southeastern Europe is the poison sac of the western world, and it is in these autocratic governments, under lan in those of democratic tradition, where the murder virus breeds.

Nihilism, as Turgeniev first expounded it in his novel, "Father and Child," in 1862, was one thing, and terrorism, touching off the World War and almost starting another one, is something else.

Governmental abstractions and utopias engaged the Nihilists. The concretions of an alien or objectionable political rule have aroused the blood lust of the terrorists, found them in their dark fealty, built their cabal of death, which is now acknowledged by a great modern state to be outside the reach of any existing processes of law. France asks for a "Permanent International Penal Court," solely to punish assaults on the "heads of states."

What would the hopeful Grotius have thought of that?—peaceful-by blue-printing his plans for an international legal millenium three centuries ago?

The Nihilists recruited workingmen and peasants. The Balkan terrorist societies draw from the middle classes.

The Balkan terrorist societies list doctors, lawyers, engineers and other professional men in their membership. They maintain their own courts, ritual, police, juries and executioners—governments within governments, with each novitiate sworn to pay with his life, if it is demanded.

The widespread and deeply-rooted Croatian secret society, Hrvatska Ustaska, is believed to have decreed the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia.

It is an outgrowth of Imro, a Macedonian society founded about 45 years ago, and the Marseille crime is believed to have been rooted in the same Macedonian blood vengeance which took the life of Archduke Ferdinand and hurled the world into the cataclysm of 1914.

Forerunner of all these societies was the dendly "Carbonari," or "Charcoal Burners," a Southern Italian group, formed to fight foreign rule in the early eighteen hundreds. It spread widely over Europe, and Lord Byron was at one time said to be a member.

Over here we have had our own Ku Klux Klan, just a lot of white nightshirt flummery on the surface, but really all of a piece with those ingrowing hatreds and manias overseas.

We're still in flux over here and hatreds don't fester as long as they do in an economically stratified society. But we have plenty of gangster terrorists to deal with, and it looks as if Washington, and the state governments, too, were really getting on the job.

Boys Who Are "Smarties"

By Winifred Black

"Life is just a bowl of cherries, is it?" said the man who is tired of everybody and everything, and most of all, tired of himself.

Winifred Black

"Well, it's more like a crate of lemons, if you ask me."

And then the man with a grouch started to tell us what was the matter with the world today.

"Everything is the matter," said the man with the grouch.

"Kids always thought they knew more than their parents, but they had sense enough to keep still about it—the parents saw to that.

"We were all taught to beware of being 'smarties or smartalecs, as they used to say down in the Ozarks when we tried to tell some old fellow in a coon-skin cap how to tree a coon.

"Now every boy you know is a smartalec and are his folks ashamed of it? Or do they even smile apologetically?

"Not so you'd notice it.

"Mamma turns her head to one side, and looks out of the corner of her eyes to see if you're jealous of her bright boy.

PARENTS' FAULT

"And dad—he doesn't turn his head—not he.

"He looks you straight in the eye and says, 'Not so bad for a kid. Eh! What?'

"Why, one of my nephews, not a day over fifteen, knows more about how I ought to run my business than I ever dreamed of knowing.

"His professor of economics taught it all to him in his junior year.

"And reputations, why they used to amount to something.

"A man used to be either an honest man or a crook. And his neighbors all knew just which he was, and no perfect stranger could come stepping in from anywhere and tell him he was a thief, and expect to get away with it.

"And friends were friends—before the great war."

"I'M A GROUCH"

The man with a grouch made a gesture that reminded you of blue smoke disappearing into the air on a sunny day.

"All over," he said, "All gone. Why a man is your bosom friend today, and tomorrow he's a bosom friend to your bitterest enemy! And if you speak about this to another friend the other friend just grins and says, 'Wake up, brother, what do you expect?'

"It makes a man feel as if he was out in the middle of a frozen pond and could hear the ice cracking all around him.

"Yes, I know I'm a grouch, but I'd rather be a grouch than a pussy foot."

And that's what this man said to me the other day, after a perfectly good dinner and he sitting with an old friend by a crackling, friendly fire. Queer, isn't it?

THOUGHTS AFTER CHANGING RIBBON

My grandfather long was a clever mechanic,
He knew the "innards" of watches and things.
Nothing it seemed could throw him in a panic,
He was at ease among fly wheels and springs.
He could fix boilers and tea kettles leaky,
He could mend door bells and overcoat stands;
He could put oil where the hinges were squeaky,
He was a wonder, I'm told, with his hands.

Give him a hammer and wrench, and contented
He'd put a shelf where a shelf ought to be.
Many a gadget my granddad invented.
At keeping things going a wizard was he!
Great was his joy when he found something broken,
That meant a task he delighted to do.
Oft by my granddad was this sentence spoken:
"I'll have it fixed in a jiffy for you!"

Where is that skill I'm supposed to inherit?
Helpless I stand when the needs for it come.
Nothing's so simple that I can repair it!
I can't drive a nail without hitting my thumb.
Mechanics, my grandfather's talk was so glib on,
Are mysteries deep which in terror I face;
Why I can't change even a typewriter ribbon
Without making a mess of myself and the place.

Isn't It So?

The past often seems happier than the present, because the fear has gone out of it.
